FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Progress at Lackland AFB
BY BRIG. GEN. WYCLIFFE E. STEELE,
USAF, Commanding

A YEAR of change, including the unification of its major basic training organizations and the addition of both fledgling and veteran pilots to its overall training program, leaves Lackland Air Force Base in 1953 stripped to essentials but geared to carry out the most diversified production mission of its 11-year history.

While the past months have brought consolidation of units on a broad scale in order to winnow out supervisory personnel for Air Force-wide usage, in the same period the Lackland physical plant has been greatly enlarged. Building projects, begun as far back as May, 1951, are now virtually complete and the year will see the opening of a base elementary school for the first time.

All of the Lackland programs, from the initial training of enlistees to the building of new officers and the ground schooling of aviation cadets, have the same underlying objectives. These include the development of mental, moral and spiritual values to the end that the individual trainee will leave Lackland with strengthened resolve and a deep seated conviction of the importance of the Air Force role in the cause of freedom.

Major organizational changes in the interest of economy and the addition of a pre-flight and pilot training program have highlighted the march of events at Lackland Air Force base during the past 12 months.

With the beginning of 1953, the 3700th
Air Force Indocctrination Wing, situated at Lackland, was officially redesignated the 3700th
Military Training Wing, indicative of a broadening of its mission under the Air Training Command's Technical Training Air Force. A single basic military training group has replaced six concerned with male and female basic airmen training at the start of 1952.

One aspect of a general revision of the Air Force pilot training program announced last September was the designation of Lackland as the center for pre-flight training. Though the base, then known as the San Antonio Aviation Cadet Center, pursued this role during World War II, it had given no ground school or other aviation cadet training since 1947, when it was renamed in honor of the late Brig. Gen. Steele.

Further Stretch-Out Threatens Forces

A new stretch-out of the National Defense program—which probably would hit the Air Force hardest—threatened the Armed Forces
this week.

The Army for several years has had 20 of its force objective of 21 divisions; the Navy now has the approximate 400 combatant vessels said to be required in the carefully calculated post-Korea buildup; but the Air Force, with about 100 wings, is many billions of dollars away in aircraft and bases from its target of 143 wings by June 1955.

Here is a step-by-step account of the new threat to the defense program, already subjected to a formidable stretch-out:

1. The Director of the Bureau of the Budget on 3 Feb. ordered all Government agencies, including the Defense Department, to "proceed toward the accomplishment of a balanced budget"
by restricting civilian hiring (military personnel are not to be used as replacements), and reviewing all construction, the objective being
"to operate at a minimum level of cost and expenditures." Department heads were told also to make proposals for "specific revisions" of the fiscal '54 budget. These revisions—in reality, reductions—are to be submitted to the Bureau of the Budget by 2 March.

2. Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson
on 4 Feb.—the day after receipt of the Budget Director's letter—ordered the Service Secretaries to limit civilian employment and said there will be no increase in military personnel assigned to Departmental administrative activities or to other administrative or headquarters activities within the U. S. In a second memorandum to the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force—also dated 4 Feb.—Mr. Wilson directed that a review of construction programs be initiated and instructed that the award of additional construction contracts subsequent to 7 Feb.
would be precluded "until such time as the specific projects have again been reviewed and specific clearance given in each instance."

3. Three days later, on 7 Feb., which was a Saturday, Deputy Secretary of Defense
Roger M. Kyes, in the capacity of Acting Secretary of Defense, sent a third memorandum to the Service Secretaries. This document could be the most important of all, for it calls for a review of the fiscal '54 budget estimates for both expenditures and obligations. This review, Mr. Kyes ordered, "should make every effort to secure intelligent savings and to reassess the urgency of proceeding at the planned rates with the various programs." He said the Services are to submit revised budget figures
by 28 Feb.

This means that only two days after the Services tell the Secretary of Defense of possible savings, if any, the

Non-Com Re-Up Rate Disturbs Services

Worried because the long-recognized
"backbone of the Services" is being weakened, leaders of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps are going to make a strong bid in the next few months to improve the lot of the career non-commissioned officers, a JOURNAL survey disclosed this week.

The Services are concerned because of a slump during the past several years, but notably in the last 12 months, of reenlist-ments among this group of career personnel.

Three factors are cited as primary causes for the decline in reenlistments among men who had previously intended to make military service a lifetime career:

1. Prolonged separations from families because of lack of housing facilities, in the United States as well as overseas.

2. Lack of stability in assignments because of the conflict in Korea and rotation requirements, which means relatively short tours in the U. S. in between overseas duty.

3. Slow-down in promotions resulting from the Bureau of the Budget slash last year in funds for an enlisted grade structure approved at the Pentagon.

Military officials report that the Army, where the three factors cited above hit hardest, is the most affected of the Services, but that the Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps are all concerned about the loss of non-commissioned officers, particularly those with technical skills acquired after long schooling and field experience.

Reenlistments among Regular Army enlisted men have dropped to about one third the rate of just a year ago, although it must be recognized this includes a group of two-year
Regular Army enlistees who had that option rather than going on duty under Selective Service. The Army never expected a large reenlistment rate among these two-year men, but did not expect to lose so many other Regular Army enlisted men in the last year.

The Air Force has experienced an increase in its reenlistment rate to date in fiscal year 1953 over fiscal '52, but a decline is expected as a result of the upcoming expiration of tours of men

A proposed draft of the Department of Defense Incentive Pay Commission's report was turned over this week to the chairman, Rear Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, USNR, (Inact), and is expected to be transmitted to Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson in a matter of days.

The report, which will have an important impact on Capitol Hill, is understood to make no recommendations for startling changes in the matter of current extra military pay, although changes reportedly are recommended, some which would increase—others which would decrease—military pay.

Department of Defense sources emphasized that the report is not yet final and is subject to last-minute change by Admiral Strauss and his associates. However, it was reported several weeks ago that the Commission was unanimous in its findings and recommendations.

Here is an unofficial prospectus of what the report will recommend to Secretary Wilson and to the Senate Armed Services Committee which asked that the study be made.

Flight Pay—The Commission will reject the Air Force plea for increased flight pay, but similarly will warn that reduction of this incentive would damage national defense. The recommendation will be made that flight pay remain as at present, but that its administration be tightened and that certain personnel not connected with the operation of the plane itself be taken off flight pay status.

Submarine Pay—The Commission will say that submarine pay, like flight pay, should be left unchanged, but that its administration should be tightened.

Such other extra pay as demolition duty,
diving duty, leprosy duty, etc., is not expected to be changed.

Combat Pay—The Navy's contention that present implementation of the Combat Pay Act is not just in that a ship must be fired on six days out of a month to be eligible will be supported by the Commission. The recommendation will be made that if a ship is fired on for one day or operates against mines for one day out of a month its personnel will be eligible for combat pay that month.

Additionally, the Commission will state that combat pay should be increased from the present rate of $45 per month to $50 per month for enlisted men and $100 per month for officers
as was recommended in the original Defense Department bill.

Parachute Pay—The Commission will not recommend any changes in current parachute pay rates of $50 for enlisted men and $100 for officers.

Overseas Allowances—Here is a major instance where a cut in pay will be recommended by the Commission. The report will state that overseas allowances

Lull in Ground; Air Action in Korean War

The biggest "fireworks" in Korea this week were supplied by Washington. Rumors emanating from Capitol Hill and elsewhere of an impending decision to set up a naval blockade around the China coast, and the assumption of command of the Eighth Army by Lt. Gen. Maxwell Taylor, overshadowed in public notice anything that happened on the battlefield.

Ground action was limited to small patrols. Fighter-bombers, flying behind a protective screen of Sabre jets, continued to pound enemy frontline positions and rear area supply dumps, but none of these raids, though successful, were of large scope. Even MIG Alley, whose airways have been the setting for many aerial clashes recently, was strangely silent except for a few minor incidents. All in all, both sides seemed to be taking a "breather."

Attack Freighter

Thursday—One direct hit and several damaging near-misses were made on an led-in enemy freighter frozen in an estuary of the Taedong River near Chinnampo seaport on the west coast. Other fighter-bombers panted supply and troop concentrations near Kangdong, northeast of Pyongyang. Ground action was all.

Friday—Low and impenetrable clouds stalled air action. Only minor clashes were fought by patrols in no man's land along the 155-mile front.

Saturday—Soviet-designed MIG's showed up over Pukchin, in north-central Korea, and Allied pilots reported destroying two planes, probably another, and damaging three others. No UN jets were lost, but a propeller-driven Navy Corsair fighter-bomber was downed by enemy ground fire. One B-36 light bomber and a Shooting Star were lost to "other causes." Patrol activity perked up considerably with the UN throwing back four light probing attacks near T-Bone Hill on the western front, and another thrust at Heartbreak Ridge in the east.

Hit Supply Areas

Sunday—Air Force and Marine fighter-bombers worked over Communist frontline positions and behind-the-line supply areas. Four MIG's and four F-86 jets battled in MIG Alley, but no enemy losses were reported by returning airmen. Ground action was described as "relatively light."

Monday—Sabre jets patrolling along the Manchurian border encountered no opposition. Fighter-bombers raided the industrial town of Kyomipo, in western Korea, and knocked out nine buildings and damaged nine others. Ground action again was officially described as "relatively light."

Tuesday—Fighting along the front again was minor, and heavy clouds grounded most aircraft.

Wednesday—Bad weather ground most planes. Sabre jets patrolled the upper rim of North Korea, but encountered no enemy planes. Ground action was described as the "quietest this year."

Col. Puderbaugh to Maxwell

Lt. Gen. Eddy Retires 31 March, Four Other General Officers Given New Army Assignments

Here are biographical sketches on the Army general officers involved in the command changes related to the forthcoming retirement of Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, USAREUR CG. New posts go to Lt. Gen. Charles L. Bolte, Seventh Army CG; Lt. Gen. William M. Hoge, Fourth Army CG; Maj. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, V Corps CG; and Maj. Gen. Ira P. Swift, III Corps CG.

General Eddy, 60, was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the then newly reorganized U.S. Army, Europe in August 1952. Prior to that time, he had served as deputy commander in chief of the European Command and commander of the Seventh Army.

Lt. Gen. Eddy

headed many of the operations of the Third Army through France, Luxembourg and Germany.

General Bolte, 57, became Commanding General of the Seventh Army in August, 1952. Prior to that time, he had served as Army Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans, Assistant Chief of Staff for Operations, and as Chief of Staff, Army Ground Forces.

During WW II, he was in command of the 34th Infantry Division which he led during fighting on the Arno River, Italy, in the break through the Gothic Line and on to capture of Bologna and surrender of Axis forces in Italy.

General Hoge, 59, has been in command of the Fourth Army since February, 1952. His previous assignment had been as Commanding General of the IX Corps in Korea. During WW II, he served as Combat Commander with the 9th Armored Division in Europe, participating in the "Battle of the Bulge" and the capture of Remagen Bridge. Later he was named Commanding General of the 4th Armored Division, a unit which spearheaded the Third Army's drive beyond the Rhine.

Maj. Gen. Clayton C. Jerome, USMC (left), new CG of the 2d Marine Air Wing, receives the DSM from General Otto P. Weyland, GC, Far East Air Forces. Lt. Gen. Glenn O. Barcus, CG, Fifth Air Force, reads the citation. The award was made as General Jerome turned over command of the 1st MAF in Korea to Maj. Gen. Vernon E. Megee (right rear).

General Dahlquist, 56, became commander of the V Corps in August, 1951. Earlier he had served as Commanding General of the 1st Infantry Division in Germany. During WW II, General Dahlquist was in command of the 36th Infantry Division at the time it made the assault on southern France in August, 1944. The Division played a major role in destroying the 19th German Army and pursued the fleeing enemy up the Rhine Valley.

Maj. Gen. Dahlquist

General Swift, who was 55 on 8 Feb., assumed command of the III Corps last July. He came to that post from a tour of duty as Commanding General of the 25th Infantry Division in Korea. Previously he had been in command of the 3d Armored Division at Ft. Knox, Ky., and served as commanding general of the headquarters command, U. S. Forces in Austria. During WW II, he served with both the 1st and 12th Army Groups in Europe, the 2d Armored Division and as assistant commander of the 82d Airborne Division.

Maj. Gen. Arnold Is Named To Be C. G. In Austria

Maj. Gen. William H. Arnold, USA, was named this week to succeed retiring Lt. Gen. George P. Hays, USA, as Commanding General of U. S. Forces in Austria.

Maj. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard, CG of the 8th Infantry Division, Ft. Jackson, S. C., will replace General Arnold as Chief of the Joint American Military Mission for Aid to Turkey (JAMMAT) at Ankara.

General Hays, 60, who has been in Austria since April 1952, retires in April after a career which dates back to WWI, when he won the nation's highest award, the Medal of Honor, for valorous action in the second Battle of the Marne.

In WWII he led the 10th Mountain Division in action in Italy. General Hays served as Commanding General of this unit, the only Mountain Division in the Army, through some of the most bitter fighting in the Apennines and helped to clear the way for the Fifth Army's advance.

General Arnold, Chief of the Mission in Turkey since July 1950, was formerly Acting Comptroller of the Army. He was Commanding General of the Americal Division during the fighting on Bougainville in the Solomons and led that unit in operations on Leyte, Samar, Cebu, Mindanao. The Americal Division received the first large-scale surrender of Japanese forces in the field on Cebu Island when some 10,000 enemy soldiers surrendered in Aug. 1945.

General Shepard has been commander of the 8th Infantry Division, a training unit, since Jan. 1952. Prior to that assignment he served as Deputy Chief of Staff of the United Nations Command and of the Far East Command. During WWII he served as assistant to the commander of the 3d Infantry Division in Italy and later was named deputy chief of staff of the Sixth Army Group.

High Army Generals Involved In Shifts

Lt. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor this week succeeded General James A. Van Fleet as Eighth Army commander in Korea and Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens announced in Washington that Lt. Gen. Charles L. Bolte will become Commanding General, U. S. Army, Europe, to replace Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, who retires on 31 March after more than 35 years service and 5 years in the permanent grade of major general.

(Biographical sketches of five officers involved in this week's changes are published in the adjoining column. The issue of 31 Jan. told highlights from the careers of Lt. Gen. McAuliffe and Maj. Gen. Young).

On the precedence list of permanent major generals in the Army, General Eddy is No. 3 and General Van Fleet is No. 8. General Walter B. Smith, who was No. 3, retired on 31 Jan. and is now Under Secretary of State.

In addition to General Taylor and General Bolte, three other Army general officers are involved in high-level changes:

Lt. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe, formerly Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, has been named by Secretary Stevens to succeed General Taylor as Deputy Chief of Staff, Operations and Administration.

Gen. Young G-1

Maj. Gen. Robert N. Young, named last month to be Deputy Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, after service as Commanding General of the Infantry Center at Ft. Benning, Ga., succeeds General McAuliffe as Army G-1. It is expected the Army will soon announce the name of a new Deputy G-1.

Lt. Gen. William M. Hoge, Commanding General of the Fourth Army at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., goes to Europe to replace General Bolte as Commanding General of the Seventh Army. Apparently, General Hoge will fill this billet less than a year. He will be 60 next January and will have 35 years service and 5 years in permanent grade of major general. Under current Army policy, this means retirement.

Gen. Dahlquist 4th Army C.G.

Maj. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, Commanding General of the V Corps in Germany and formerly Commanding General of the 1st Infantry Division in that country, will succeed General Hoge.

Maj. Gen. Ira P. Swift, Commanding General of III Corps at Ft. MacArthur, Calif., was reassigned simultaneously to Europe, but his specific assignment was not announced.

The general officer changes, on the basis of normal allocation of ranks, should mean an additional star for General Taylor in Korea, General Young at the Pentagon and General Dahlquist at Ft. Sam Houston headquarters of the Fourth Army.

Colonel Richardson to WAPD

Colonel Guy B. Richardson, USAF, has been named Director of Production for the Western Air Procurement District, embracing seven western states. It is announced by Maj. Gen. William M. Morgan, USAF, commander.

Colonel Richardson, Inspector General of the district since July, is replaced by his assistant Lt. Col. Eugene P. Fishburn.

A graduate of the American Institute of Banking, Colonel Richardson received his first commission with the 7th Regiment, National Guard, in 1928. For 17 years he was assistant treasurer of the General Contract Purchase Corp., a subsidiary of the Industrial Bank of Commerce of New York City. He was called into active duty with the Air Force in 1942, with successive assignments as procurement officer at Wright-Patterson AFB, as Chief of District Contract Administration in New York and with the Far East Air Force. He came to the Western Air Procurement District headquarters in Los Angeles in 1950.

Presidential Appointment

President Eisenhower has sent to the Senate the nomination of Nicholas Mandzak for permanent promotion to Chief Radio Electrician in the Navy.

Adm. DeLany Slated To Be Stassen's MSA Assistant

Vice Adm. Walter S. DeLany, USN-Ret., will be named Assistant to Mutual Security Administrator Harold E. Stassen, on or about 1 April.

Retired on 1 Feb., as Commander of the Eastern Sea Frontier, the Admiral is now on vacation in the Mediterranean and is expected to report to Mr. Stassen's office in Washington at the end of the month.

Vice Adm. DeLany

A 1912 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, Admiral DeLany reached the statutory retirement age, 62, on 19 Jan. He had completed more than forty years' active Naval service, including more than 10 years in flag rank.

At the beginning of World War II, he was Assistant Chief of Staff for Operations to the Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet, later taking command of the USS New Orleans. Subsequently, he served as Assistant Chief of Staff to the Commander in Chief of the U. S. Fleet, and as Commander, Battleships and Cruisers, Pacific Fleet.

Pay Increase "Far Short" Navy Relief Society Says

Vice Adm. V. R. Murphy, USN-Ret., Executive Vice President of the Navy Relief Society, this week scored as inadequate the pay increase which went into effect for Service personnel last May.

In the Society's annual report, Admiral Murphy notes that the increase fell "far short . . . of being commensurate with the actualities of the situation." He said this was particularly true in the cases of enlisted personnel and junior officers, and he noted that the increase has had "a negligible effect upon the Society's activities."

Cases handled by the Society during 1952 set new post-war records, Admiral Murphy said, "both numerically and financially." Service cases (those involving no direct financial assistance) numbered 83,297, compared with 72,908 the previous year.

Precarious Budgets

Outright grants or gratuities were given in 4,309 cases, for a total of $280,794, representing a 17 per cent increase in the number of cases and a 19 per cent increase in money expended for this purpose. "Most enlisted families' budgets and some younger officers' are precariously balanced at best," Admiral Murphy said, "so that when a serious emergency, such as an extended illness, fire, death or their equivalent, strike, no real help is afforded through assistance by a loan. An outright grant is the only practical means of relieving the distress."

Leading Units

The Society, Admiral Murphy said, "is in a stronger overall position" today "than at any time since World War II." He noted that total contributions for 1952 (as has been the case for every year since 1947) "substantially exceeded that of the year before." Four of the Society's auxiliaries which led in contributions were San Diego, San Pedro, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

He emphasized, however, that these results "cannot be allowed to lead to complacency or any slackening of effort." With the area of the Society's activities "constantly expanding from year to year," he said, "there can be no relaxing of our fund raising efforts."

Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations, is President of the Society. Other members are Admiral Murphy, Executive Vice President; Rear Adm. J. J. Mahoney, USN-Ret., Assistant to the Executive Vice President; Admiral H. R. Stark, USN-Ret., Second Vice President; Mrs. L. T. DuBose, Third Vice President and Capt. E. S. Earnhardt, USN-Ret., Secretary and Treasurer.

The Army this week exhibited a proposed optional dress blue uniform—Army blue coat and sky blue trousers—which may be adopted for voluntary purchase by enlisted personnel. The four models shown here differ in color of chevrons, service stripes, trouser and cap piping. Probable choice is a uniform with gold trimmings. The soldiers who wear the model uniforms are, left to right, Sgt. David M. Jordan, SFC Bernard H. Smith, SFC Neil E. Southern and M/Sgt. Albert Wilson. All four uniforms show master sergeant stripes.

Army Models Proposed Dress "Blues" For EM, May Ask Congress O.K. For New Issue Uniform

Barring a switch in plans, the Army is expected to announce in the near future specifications for an optional dress blue uniform for enlisted men.

At the same time, the Army has under study—and may ask Congress to approve—a new coat-type uniform which would be issued to enlisted men. The Eisenhower battle jacket would be dropped.

Models of the proposed blue uniform—it would cost individuals who desire to purchase it about $80—were shown to reporters at the Pentagon this week after a showing for General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, and other top Army officers.

(THE JOURNAL reported 18 Oct. 1952 that an optional blue dress uniform for enlisted men had strong support.)

The coat of the dress uniform is a dark blue color called Army blue, while the trousers are of a lighter, sky-blue hue.

Four different models were shown at the Pentagon, the difference in each being the color of the chevrons, piping, and trouser stripes. One was red, another white, a third blue and the fourth—and apparently most popular—had gold nylon accessories.

Army officials stressed that the blue uniform, if adopted, will not be a mandatory item of issue, but will be purchased voluntarily by those who desire this garb. Virtually identical to the optional dress uniform of officers, it would be worn with a white shirt, black tie, black socks and black shoes.

The blue uniforms are made of flannel, also known as kersey or doeskin, Army clothing experts related.

Meantime, the likelihood is that Congress will be asked to approve a change in the uniform issued to enlisted men. Army uniform stocks are said to be low, which would make this an ideal time to begin plans for a new uniform.

The greenish-gray uniform which has been worn for more than a year by troops of the 3d Infantry Regiment at Ft. Myer, Va., and Ft. Lesley McNair, Washington, D. C., has not proved satisfactory and will not be adopted, although the 3d Infantry will continue to wear the uniform for the present.

Instead, what is now receiving serious consideration is an enlisted man's uniform which will be similar to the dark green coat and "pinks" worn by officers.

This uniform would have a dark green, OD 51, coat and the D 54 pink trousers, but the trousers would be made of 16-ounce serge instead of material used in officer uniforms.

Retirement Rights For 30-Year Reserves Asked

The Department of Defense has asked Congress to remove a current restriction on the retirement of Army and Air Force non-Regular officers with more than 30 years' service.

There are about 300 Army Reserve officers on active duty who have more than 30 years' active service. The Air Force has only four.

The need for new legislation to remove an inequity was told as follows by the Department of Defense in a communication to Capitol Hill:

Department's Request

"The purpose of this proposal is to amend section 202 of the Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948 (62 Stat. 1084) by deleting from said section the words 'or more than thirty.'"

"The cited section 202 amended section 5 of the Act of July 31, 1935 (49 Stat. 507, as amended (10 U.S.C. 943a) by providing for the voluntary retirement of Regular and Reserve officers of the Army and Air Force upon completion of not less than 20 or more than 30 years' active Federal service, at least 10 years of which must be active commissioned service.

"The Act of 31 July 1935 provided for the retirement of Regular Army officers after 15 years' service and was adopted primarily as a means of reducing the officer strength of the Army, when necessary, and for alleviating the concentration of officers of the same seniority and length of service which was created as a result of integration during World War I. In its present form, it is the authority for the retirement of Regular Army officers only in the relatively few instances where retirement with less than 30 years' service is granted for extremely compassionate reasons or in connection with the elimination action under Title I of the Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948.

Reserve Officer Penalized

"Section 202 places a penalty upon the Reserve officer with more than 30 years' service by denying to him retirement under its provisions. It is believed that the deletion of the words 'or more than 30' would remedy this condition and would permit the retirement of non-Regular officers at any time after the completion of 20 years' active Federal service, at least 10 of which are active commissioned service. Such retirement, as is the case of officers in the Regular Army, would continue to be within and subject to the discretion of the Secretary of the Army or of the Air Force.

"S. 2346, 82nd Congress, was substantially the same as this proposal.

"It is estimated that the additional cost resulting from enactment of this proposal will be, for the Departments indicated, as follows:

"Army: There are approximately 300 Reserve officers presently on active duty who have more than 30 years' of active service. If this proposal is enacted so as to be in effect for the last quarter of the fiscal year 1953, it is estimated that 150 of these officers would retire with a resulting cost of approximately $155,000 to the 'Retired Pay' appropriation. However, as a partial offset to this amount would be savings to the 'Retired Pay' appropriation that would accrue if any officers, who, under the present law would retire with 29 years' service, elect to remain on active duty until they have completed 30 or more years of service.

Maximum Cost

"In future years, it is estimated that the proposed legislation would result in a maximum additional cost of approximately $740,000 to the 'Retired Pay' appropriation annually and will continue until all Reserve officers who have accumulated over 30 years' service prior to enactment have been retired and then decrease until officers affected have attained age 60.

"Air Force: There are only four known instances of Reserve officers on active duty with this Department with over 30 years' service. Accordingly, the additional cost to the 'Retired Pay' appropriation would be negligible. In view of the number of officers who, under the present law would retire after 29 years' service, but under the proposed law continue on active duty, it is probable that the enactment of this legislation would result in a savings to the appropriation indicated.

"The Department of the Army was designated as the representative of the Department of Defense for this legislation."

Defense Spending Reported

From July to December 1952, the Defense Department obligated $17.6 billion for procurement of major equipment and supplies and for construction, while total obligations for the six-month period were about $27.2 billion.

In the 30 months since Korea, $169.7 billion in obligational authority has been made available by Congress to the Department of Defense, of which $138.7 billion was obligated. Of this amount, $98.1 billion was for procurement and construction.

The Army has accounted for procurement and construction obligations of $34.2 billion since Korea, compared with $24.3 billion for the Navy and $39.6 billion for the Air Force.

Magness, Jr., G.S.C., now the assistant chief of staff, G-4, for this newest NATO command. The award was given for outstanding service in Korea and covers a period during part of which he was under General Wyman's command in the IXth corps, there.

Viking Division Leads

The 47th Infantry "Viking" Division of Minnesota and North Dakota leads all of the National Guard divisions recently released from active Federal service in the status of its reorganization, according to Brig. Gen. J. E. Nelson, Minnesota Adjutant General.

A total of 2,932 officers and enlisted men were present at ceremonies last month when 107 divisional units were reconstituted as part of the National Guard of the two states. Of this number, 71 officers and 451 enlisted men were in North Dakota and 315 officers and 2,095 enlisted men were in Minnesota units. Almost all of them recently completed two years of active Federal service, many in Korea.

The 47th Division is one of six National Guard divisions that were inducted into Federal service in late 1950 and early 1951. Four of these divisions were returned to control of their respective states in September 1952. The 40th Division of California is runner-up to the 47th Division in the status of its reorganization.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Commands Airborne Bn.

Lt. Col. Murray L. Harvey has been named commander of the 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team's First Battalion at Ft. Benning, Ga. He replaces Lt. Col. Warren Minton, who has been appointed officer of the 508th.

ARMY FOOTS LOWER BILL

The Army has reduced the cost of its foot bill by cutting the cost of a can of foot powder from 16 to 5 cents and by making canvas hospital slippers with a "universal" sole rather than rights and lefts.

Heretofore, the slippers were made either for right feet and left feet, but the right foot wore out much quicker, making it necessary to discard the entire pair.

During the last six months, it was reported this week, economies have been achieved through revised specifications for 21 items of supply.

Preventive Medicine

Col. Thomas E. Patton, jr. has been named Chief of the Preventive Medicine Branch, USAREUR Medical Division. Before arriving in Europe, he was Third Army Chief of Preventive Medicine. He succeeds Col. Robert L. Callison, who returned to the U. S. last month for a new assignment with the Second Army.

New Jeep Ambulance

An ambulance jeep for evacuating wounded servicemen over rough terrain has been developed by the Army Ordnance Corps and may soon be put into production. Two models recently were built by Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., and are being tested by the Ordnance Corps and the Army Field Forces.

Primarily, the new jeep was designed to provide more space and greater comfort. The entire vehicle is enclosed and has a forced air heater. Its wheel base has been increased from a normal 81 inches to 100 inches, thus improving the riding quality of the jeep ambulance and providing ample space for litters.

Normally, the jeep can accommodate two litter and one or two ambulatory patients. It can, if necessary, accommodate three litter patients, or two litter and as many as four ambulatory patients. There also is room for a medical attendant to treat the patients while the vehicle is in motion.

The new jeep design will afford no great maintenance problem. Parts used in its manufacture are 96 per cent interchangeable with other standard military jeeps.

Col. Albrecht USAREUR Engineer Officer

Col. Frank M. Albrecht, Engineer for the zone of Communications in France, has been named to succeed Col. David H. Tulley, as Engineer Officer of the U. S. Army, Europe.

Colonel Tulley returned to the U. S. by air to take over a new post in the office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4 in Washington, D. C. He has been USAREUR Engineer officer since early last December.

Appoint Lt. Col. Watkins As Associate Publisher

Lt. Col. John C. A. Watkins, USAFR, has been named associate publisher of the Providence Journal Company, publishers of the Providence Journal, the Evening Bulletin, the Sunday Journal, and owners of radio station WPJB, all at Providence, R. I.

Colonel Watkins, who has been assistant publisher under Sevellon Brown, editor and publisher, was named to the new post on 4 Feb. by Journal Company directors. He will take over additional administrative duties from Mr. Brown, who retains the title of publisher.

Lt. Col. Watkins

In World War II, Colonel Watkins served in the Mediterranean theater, where he was operations officer of the 325th Fighter Group. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with nine Oak Leaf clusters, among other decorations. His flying record included three enemy fighters destroyed and two probables.

Later, Colonel Watkins was assigned to the Air Force operational planning staff in Washington. He was in the operational plans division as assistant chief of air staff—plans, and later became executive to the deputy chief of the air staff. He was awarded the Secretary of War's commendation ribbon.

Following the war, Colonel Watkins was one of the organizers of the Rhode Island wing of the Air Force Association. He served as first commander of the Rhode Island wing.

Colonel Watkins is a son of Col. Dudley W. Watkins, USAF-Ret., and Mrs. Watkins of Coconut Grove, Fla., and Exeter, R. I. He is a member of the Army and Navy Club, the National Press Club and the Metropolitan Club in Washington, the Hope Club of Providence, and the Dunes Club at Narragansett. He is a member of the board of trustees of Roger Williams Hospital and also of the board of Butler Hospital.

New Tank Recovery Vehicle

Production of a new tank recovery vehicle is planned for the Chrysler Detroit Tank Plant as soon as engineering work has been completed, it is revealed by Mr. Thomas F. Morrow, Works Manager of the Chrysler Detroit Tank Plant. He said details of the new tanklike vehicle were classified, but that Chrysler's Central Engineering Division had been assigned the engineering project by the Ordnance Corps.

"The plant has successfully put into effect the stretch-out program that it was given in early December by the Ordnance Corps," Mr. Morrow said. He added that the stretch-out was accomplished with no decrease in personnel because of the added responsibilities the Ordnance Corps had assigned to the plant.

Medical Officer Specialists

American Medical Specialty Boards have recently certified 84 more Army medical officers and two, previously certified, were given additional subspecialty certification, Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, the Army Surgeon General has announced.

This brings the number of board-certified Army medical officers on active duty as of 31 Dec. 1952, to 640 as compared with 500 for the previous year.

General Armstrong attributes the increase to the Army Medical Service's Graduate Professional Program inaugurated in 1947, and to the recall to active duty since the outbreak of the Korean conflict of Reserve medical officers, of whom some were board certified.

Gen. Bowman AFCE Eng. Off.

Brig. Gen. Frank Otto Bowman, former commander of U. S. ground forces in the Ryukyus, has returned to the Far East to assume command of Engineer troops of Army Forces, Far East.

His current tour marks the general's third command in the Orient. Following the close of WW II, during which he served in the North African and European campaigns, the general became Engineer of the Northern Japan Service Command in 1945. He served from March to June 1946 in the Ryukyus prior to returning to the States to become Assistant Chief of Staff for Supply of the Army.

STARTLING FACTS ABOUT GILFILLAN GCA RADAR

A Gilfillan GCA Radar now costs less than $375,000. But one Gilfillan GCA Radar on Iwo Jima alone, saved 100 B-29 aircraft, valued, even at that time, at $600,000 each—a total of $60,000,000.

One Gilfillan GCA Radar in the Azores, during a period of 6 hours, saved three C54s, seven C47s, and two B-25 aircraft.

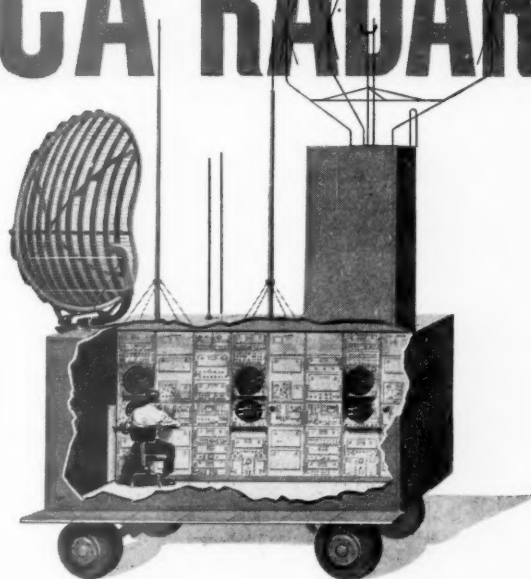

On the Berlin Airlift one Gilfillan GCA Radar landed 54,000 aircraft during a ten-month period.

Eight civilian GCA Radars in the United States are officially credited by the CAA with saves of 77 aircraft under extreme emergency conditions.

The 14 U.S. and foreign airlines operating through Gander, Newfoundland have, by mutual decision, selected Gilfillan GCA Radar as the exclusive navigational aid. This Gilfillan GCA Radar has a perfect record of 14,000 safe landings.

Gilfillan GCA Radar equipment is used in landing 2,000 planes every day around the world.

Even these few examples, taken from a phenomenal record of more than 3 million Gilfillan GCA landings, make one fact unmistakable: the value of safely landed aircraft alone completely overshadows the original Gilfillan GCA Radar cost.

To this must be added the incalculable value of human lives, of international good will, of increased public acceptance of air travel.

Gilfillan GCA Radar is the official landing aid of the U.S. Air Force, the U.S. Navy, the U.S. Marine Corps and the air forces of Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Great Britain, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal and South Africa.

Only Gilfillan GCA Radar is standard equipment among 24 nations of the free world.

Navy Prepares List Of Lt's. Facing Demotion

The names of more than five thousand Navy lieutenants who will be demoted on 31 March unless the controversial Davis Amendment is repealed are being compiled by the Bureau of Naval Personnel for transmittal to all ships and stations.

A Navy spokesman told the JOURNAL, administrative machinery must be geared for instant action if the move now underway in the Congress fails to repeal or modify the restrictive riders. Only six weeks remain before the amendment takes effect.

If the amendment is not off the books before 31 March, about 5,400 lieutenants on active duty will be reverted to lieutenant (jg) as of that date. The Navy said "Those holding temporary appointments with a date of rank of 1 April 1952 or later will be affected."

Others Delayed

At the same time, the Navy noted that promotions of "the majority of those selected for the grades of commander and captain will be delayed until the end of the current fiscal year" if the rider is retained.

"In fairness" to the author of the amendment (Representative Glenn R. Davis, (R-Wisc.)), the Navy said "it must be emphasized that the percentage limitations imposed by that section were based on Bureau of Naval Personnel estimates relative to planned promotions and predicted on end fiscal year 1953 grade distribution submitted in hearings before a House subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations in June 1952."

Navy Error

"If the estimates of end fiscal year 1953 strengths in the various grades were now valid," the Navy said, "the effect on promotions would be much less significant and few, if any, reversions in grade would be necessary. However, it is now apparent that estimates submitted were considerably in error because of inability to determine many months in advance the end fiscal year 1953 strengths in the various grades."

This was true because "Predictions of grade distribution as of a date in the future," the Navy said, "are subject to great error because of the many variables in the field of recalls, releases, and promotions of Reserve officers."

Prior to enactment of the appropriations bill the Navy said it "had expected to continue its long-range promotion point after normal service in grade, and with total service as prescribed in the Officer Personnel Act of 1947."

The Navy noted that the Secretary of Defense "vigorously supported by the military departments, is seeking removal of the limitations" and that "Should this be successful, it follows that the limitations" on the Navy "would no longer obtain."

Navy Retirements

Rear Adm. Ralph O. Davis, Commandant of the Fifth Naval District, Norfolk, Va., has been retired in the rank of Vice Admiral after completing more than 38 years' service. A 1914 graduate of the Naval Academy, Admiral Davis reached the statutory retirement age of 62 on 19 Jan. He was succeeded by Rear Adm. Ingolf N. Kiland.

Four other officers will reach statutory retirement age during 1953. They are: Vice Adm. John L. Hall, jr., Rear Admirals George H. Fort, John H. Brown, jr., and John L. McCrea.

Admiral Hall, Commandant of the Western Sea Frontier, and Admiral McCrea, Commandant of the First Naval District, will be retired on 1 June, after reaching the statutory age in May.

Admiral Fort, Commandant of the Potomac River Naval Command, will be retired on 1 Oct., and Admiral Brown, Commandant of the Fourth Naval District, will be retired on 1 November.

New Navy Team Studies Cuts, Consolidations

Under Secretary of the Navy Charles Thomas said this week that the Navy is studying the 1953 budget in an attempt to effect all possible economies.

The new Under Secretary said this may mean "elimination or consolidation, if it can be done." So far, he indicated, no recommendations along these lines have been made, but Navy officials and officers are approaching the problem "on the basis that we want to save everything we can without jeopardizing our program."

He said in his opinion, the study "has taken a very constructive approach. All economies that can be made without affecting the Navy's part in the overall defense program will be made."

He indicated that any resultant cutbacks will be made within the shore establishment, and that no economies will be attempted which might "damage the potency of the fleet."

The new Under Secretary was sworn in 10 Feb. in the office of Secretary of the Navy Robert Anderson, in the presence of numerous high-ranking members of the Defense Department. Among those present were Deputy Secretary of Defense Roger M. Kyes; Secretary Anderson; Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air John F. Floberg; former Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball; Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations; and General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, as well as numerous other flag and general officers.

Mr. Thomas said at a meeting with the press on 11 Feb., that he has been "boning up on the basic organization charts of the Navy," and trying to find out what his "job is all about." He said he will do his best in the assignment, "recognizing the tremendous responsibilities that go with the job."

Fire Hits Craig AFB Club

A $200,000 fire totally destroyed the Craig AFB, Ala., Officers Club early Sunday morning, 8 Feb. All guests were away from the club when the fire was discovered by janitors.

Believed to have started in the roof of the kitchen as a result of an electrical short circuit, flames swept the building and consumed the entire roof and the interior before being brought under control by the Base Fire Department.

Some of the lounge furniture in the club was saved by volunteer workers and firemen. Important papers and records were also saved and as far as is known all cash receipts of the club for the Saturday night activity were also saved.

NATO Anti-Sub Games To Start Next Week

Anti-submarine training exercises will be conducted off the East coast of Florida and the Carolinas by combined U. S., Netherlands and Canadian naval and air forces beginning Monday, 16 Feb.

The joint air-surface-submarine operation will be known as "Exercise Buffet." It is the first of its kind scheduled in the Western Atlantic, according to Admiral Lynde D. McCormick, NATO Commander-in-Chief, Western Atlantic.

Two Royal Netherlands escort vessels, a squadron of RCAF Lancaster aircraft, and a U. S. hunter-killer group will participate.

Vice Adm. Laurance T. DuBose, recently relieved as Chief of the Bureau of Naval Personnel, will be in charge of the exercise. The hunter-killer group will be commanded by Rear Adm. Aaron P. Storrs, III, Commander of Carrier Division 16.

U. S. units participating in the exercise will include the carrier Palau, the submarines Runner, Burrfish, and Cobia, the destroyers Laffey, Lowry, D. M. Fox, Stormes, Warrington and Purdy, escort vessels Haas, Cross, Hemming and Roberts. Air Anti-Submarine Squadron 32 is the air unit embarked on Palau.

The purpose of the exercise is to provide operational and tactical training in anti-submarine warfare for NATO anti-submarine forces in the Western Atlantic area.

SAILORS AID DUTCH

Dutch guilders, English pounds and U. S. dollars were all lumped together in a fund contributed by sailors of two U. S. Navy destroyers for flood relief in Holland.

More than $1,200 was raised as an initial donation by the crews of the USS Bristol and USS Johnson of the Northern European Task Force under Vice Adm. Jerauld Wright, USN. The ships had just arrived in Amsterdam, Holland, when the worst gales in 80 years breached dikes in that country. As sea water poured over the countryside the services of both ships were immediately made available to the Dutch government.

Rear Adm. H. E. Orem, commander of U. S. Naval Forces in Germany, also personally toured the stricken area and two other ships, of the Rhine river patrol, were on their way to Holland within hours of his arrival.

In England, meanwhile, officers and men of the U. S. Navy's London headquarters were donating clothing for victims of the weekend British floods.

Air Safety Record

On 11 Feb. the domestic scheduled airlines of the U. S. completed a full 12 months of operation without a single passenger fatality, states an announcement by the Air Transport Association. During this 12-month period, they flew 13,150,000,000 revenue passenger miles, which is equivalent to one passenger making 2,548,449 round trips between New York and San Francisco. During this 12-month period, the scheduled domestic airlines averaged a landing or takeoff every 7 seconds, or approximately 13,000 per day.

"These figures," said Admiral Emory S. Land, USN (Ret.), ATA President, "highlight the trend of expansion which has taken place in the U. S. domestic scheduled passenger service over a period of 15 years. In addition, they clearly show that flight safety has more than kept pace with the growth in operations."

Rear Adm. Yoran Named IG of Navy Supply Corps

Rear Adm. G. F. Yoran (SC), USN, Director of the Cost Inspection Division of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, has been named Inspector General of the Supply Corps, succeeding Rear Adm. M. G. Slatrow, who retired for disability on 1 Feb.

Admiral Yoran is succeeded by Comdr. R. M. Whittemore, his assistant, who will be relieved by Capt. Fred W. Hesser early in March. Capt. Hesser was recently nominated for the rank of Rear Admiral.

Captain Hesser has been General Stores Supply Officer in charge of the General Stores Office in Philadelphia. He will be succeeded by Capt. James W. Boundy, who is now Commanding Officer of the Naval Supply Depot, Bayonne, N. J. Captain Boundy, in turn, will be succeeded by Capt. Hugh C. Haynsworth, Jr.

Admiral Yoran, a veteran of nearly 35 years Navy service, is a native of Eugene, Ore. He entered the Navy as an Ensign in the Pay Corps in August 1917, and was relieved of active duty in May 1919 to return to private industry in the employ of a Los Angeles banking firm. He subsequently returned to active duty in the Supply Corps.

Bill to Promote 2 Retired Cmdrs. is Introduced

Representative James P. S. Devereux (R-Md.), has introduced a bill to promote two retired Navy commanders to the rank of captain. The officers affected by the bill are Comdr. Edward W. Rawlins, USN-Ret., and Comdr. Edward K. Shanahan, USN-Ret.

The Rawlins case has had a long legislative history. It was first introduced in the Congress four years ago this month. In the 81st Congress it passed the Senate and was favorably reported by the House Armed Services Committee, but never finally acted upon. In the 82d Congress it was again introduced in both Houses, but the Senate laid it aside without prejudice with the comment that it would be held up until there was some indication that the House would consider it favorably.

Commander Rawlins had testified that his record, when considered by wartime promotion panels, was incomplete, and that it contained a mediocre fitness report later repudiated by its author. Three flag officers, Admiral Robert B. Carney, Vice Adm. Francis C. Denebrink and Rear Adm. Earl E. Stone, testified in behalf of Commander Rawlins, and his promotion was strongly recommended by Admiral Carney. In addition, former Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Louis E. Denfeld submitted a written statement in Commander Rawlins' behalf.

Commander Shanahan's case was reviewed by the Navy's Board for Correction of Naval Records, and the Board recommended his promotion to captain. Both he and Comdr. Rawlins have since been retired.

Representative Devereux's bill, H. R. 2835, was referred to the House Committee on Armed Services on 9 Feb. It would authorize the President to promote both officers.

Air-Armament Systems Studied in Combat by ARDC

An on-the-spot study of the operation of Air Force air-armament systems under actual combat conditions in Korea has been completed by an Air Research and Development Command colonel, who obtained most of his data on combat missions with Far East Air Force air crews.

As a first-hand observer for ARDC Headquarters, Baltimore, Md., A. A. Arnheim, assistant for management and organization, Directorate of Armament, recently returned from a six-weeks' tour of Korea.

The results of his study may play a part in the modification and improvement of present armament systems and the development of new techniques and systems to meet the existing needs in Korea, Air Force officials said.

Colonel Arnheim made his evaluations and observations while flying combat missions with B-26 night intruder and B-29 medium bomber crews. In all, the Colonel flew 14 combat missions with B-26 and B-29 units based in Korea, Japan and Okinawa. In addition he observed close support strikes from forward positions in the United Nations' battlelines and studied operations of fighter-interceptor and fighter-bomber aircraft.

New Post For Gen. Webber

Maj. Gen. Kenneth E. Webber, USAF, who has been deputy director of procurement and production at Air Materiel Command headquarters at Wright Patterson AFB, Ohio, this month will replace Maj. Gen. Arthur Thomas, USAF, who is retiring, as Commanding General of AMC's Eastern Air Procurement district in New York City.

General Webber, who was chief of the Army Audit Agency until his transfer to the Air Force in June 1948, was Air Force finance director until assignment to the AMC last June.

General Thomas retires after 35 years service. He has been in command of the Eastern Air Procurement District for the past three and a half years.

Md. U. to Conduct Courses At Greenland Air Bases

All bases in Greenland—Thule, Sondrestrom and Narsarsuaq—will have University of Maryland classes starting this Spring.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, President of the University of Maryland and Col. Joseph R. Ambrose, Dean of the College of Special and Continuation Studies, are expected to arrive at Peperrell AFB on 21 Feb. to officiate at the opening of University of Maryland on-base educational programs at each of the Greenland bases.

The three northern NEAC installations had been under study for a branch of the University for some time. A base-wide survey of the local Information and Education offices determined the desire for the establishment of a branch.

The University sends a professor to the base to conduct classes, under the Maryland plan. Each class is of eight weeks duration and is evaluated at three credit hours.

If a student takes all the courses offered by the University, he can receive credit for one half-year in one year of off-duty study.

Important Week Ahead For AF Temp. Promotions

Next week is going to be an important one for hundreds of Air Force officers anticipating selection for temporary promotion in 1953.

On Monday, 16 Feb., a board will be convened at the Pentagon to review initial selection made by major commands for temporary advancements to colonel and lieutenant colonel.

Then, on Tuesday, 17 Feb., unless plans are changed, Air Force spokesmen will testify before the House Armed Services Committee concerning the effects of the Davis Amendment.

The outcome of the Capitol Hill hearings will determine the number of Air Force temporary promotions which can be made in the current fiscal year, for unless the Davis Amendment is repealed or modified, the Air Force will be able to make only a few promotions.

The Air Force has told Congress earlier that during the present fiscal year it was first contemplated to promote one out of seven officers in grades above second lieutenant. This was later readjusted to one out of 10; but the Davis Amendment will slash this ratio to only one out of 33.

The Air Force plans to compile approved recommended lists between 15 March and 1 April, with the first temporary promotions slated after that date. Incidentally, 1 April is the date the Davis Amendment would go into effect.

There are currently, even with the promotion rider, a limited number of vacancies to permit some promotions. But Air Force leaders are hopeful that the restriction will be eliminated and that delayed promotions can be made during the current fiscal year.

REDUCE DUTY AT GOOSE

Tours for men at Goose AB and Narsarsuaq AB have been reduced to 12 months, it is announced by the Northeast Air Command.

The new tour applies to all men, married or single, who do not have their dependents with them in the Command. Men with dependents have a two-year tour.

Although the reduction went into effect 1 Feb., the first personnel are expected to be rotated under this provision in July. This means that no persons affected will serve more than 17 months.

The time is necessary to allow for obtaining ZI station assignments and replacements for rotating personnel. Under current schedules, all men at these bases will be on a 12-month basis by 1 Jan. 1954.

AF States Recalls

The Air Force said this week that during the period 1 March 1953 to 30 April 1953, 102 pilots, 18 observers and 138 non-rated officers in selected skills will be called to active duty from airmen status or from among Reservists holding mobilization assignments or designations.

Ease Conditions For Making Regular AF Application

The Air Force has taken steps to make it easier for Reserve officers on active duty to apply for Regular commissions. The deadline for submitting applications concurrently was extended two weeks, from 28 Feb. to 15 Mar.

Effective immediately, said the Air Force, AFR 36-5, 25 Feb. 1952, as amended, is being revised as follows:

"An applicant otherwise eligible under provisions of AFR 36-5 may submit application providing that the period of time from his date of birth to opening date of period for submitting applications for Regular Air Force commission will not exceed 27 years by more than the number of years, months, and days (not to exceed four and one-half years) of actual Federal commissioned service performed by him since 31 Dec. 1947 in any component of the Air Force or Army of the United States. At time of appointment, a successful applicant may not exceed the age of 27 years by more than the number of years, months, and days (not to exceed five years) of actual Federal commissioned service performed by him since 31 Dec. 1947 in any component of the Air Force or Army of the United States."

The Air Force said no exceptions to above age limitation may be made. However, recommendation for waiver by major air commander as previously required by paragraph 7c AFR 36-5a, dated 29 Dec. 1952 no longer is required.

Applicant's immediate superior will endorse completed application to Director of Training, Hq USAF, Attn: Personnel Procurement Division by the most expeditious means. The 1 Jan. to 28 Feb. 1953 application period was extended to 15 Mar. 1953, but applications reaching Hq. USAF after 15 Mar. will not be accepted.

All commanders were told to take immediate action to insure widest publicity in order that officers eligible under provisions AFR 36-5 and persons concerned with indorsing applications are apprised of the above.

12th AF to Quit Germany For New Base in France

Headquarters of the 12th Air Force will be shifted from Wiesbaden, Germany, where it has been located for the past two years, to the French Zone in Germany within the next six months, it was announced this week.

The projected move, motivated by strategic considerations, will consolidate the 12th Air Force to advantageous positions west of the Rhine River, thereby providing a natural fortification in event of aggression.

"Since the 12th Air Force is a tactical command," said Maj. Gen. Truman H. Landon, chief of staff, USAF, "its strategic change of location was an eventuality."

The new location will afford the group more elbow room for effective air battle and support of the ground forces, according to Maj. Gen. Gean C. Strother, commanding general.

AMC Assistant Chaplain

Lt. Col. Carl W. Hewlett has been assigned to Air Materiel Command Headquarters as assistant air chaplain. The new assignment for Colonel Hewlett is announced by Colonel L. C. Habetz, air chaplain for AMC, Wright Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Colonel Hewlett comes to AMC from the Air University at Maxwell Field, Ala., where he served as wing chaplain. Before this assignment, he was stationed with the 36th Fighter Wing at Thurstenfeldbrück, Germany, the former World War II Luftwaffe training base.

Air Transport Expert Calls For Air Transport Force

Maj. Gen. William H. Tunner, USAF, who commanded the China-Burma-India "Hump Operation" in WWII, the Berlin Airlift and the Korean Airlift, has recommended creation of an Air Transport Force including all air transport forces of the Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps.

In an article in the current issue of the Air University Quarterly, published at Maxwell AFB, Ala., General Tunner traces the history of air lift operations by the Germans and Allies during WWII.

The experiences and lessons learned from those operations, he says, pointed the way for the successful Berlin operation which handed the Russians their first major defeat in the cold war.

Again in Korea, General Tunner maintains, Communist aggression was halted and turned back because airlift afforded a steady stream of supplies and manpower. Every major airlift has been decisive, he says, yet these have merely scratched the surface of a potential logistical force which if centrally controlled, strategically planned, and properly used, can vastly increase striking power.

Highlighting his discussion of the planning and utilization of air transportation for future global employment, is General Tunner's plan for placing all air transport forces into one single organization—an Air Transport Force.

Other Articles

Other articles in the Quarterly include:

"International Law and Aerial Bombing," by Capt. Hamilton DeSaussure, a scholarly study of attempts throughout recent history to establish international law governing aerial bombardment. "Air Force and the Totality of War," by Col. John T. Fitzwater, discusses the serious gap in knowledge of the relationship of strategic air force to war, of the distinction between the terms "air power" and "air force" to targets removed physically, logistically, and politically from the battle lines. "Geopolitics and Air Power," by Dr. Joseph S. Roucek, established authority on geopolitics and international relations, points out how man's conquest of the air has upset the traditional axioms of geopolitics and theories of world balance of power.

Civilian Components

The discussion of the controversial question of "Organization and Training of the Civilian Components," introduced in the winter '51-'52 issue of the Quarterly Review by Col. Gerhard Schriever, is resumed by Mr. Myron G. H. Ligda. His "An Air Guardsman's Point of View" opposes an integrated, federally controlled Air Force Reserve Program. Col. Lowell G. Sidwell presents the value which could be derived from an "Air Force Suggestion Program."

"NATO Activities" features two short articles on Western build-up in Europe. Vice Adm. d'Escadre Andre Georges Lemonnier, commandant of the NATO Defense College, discusses the organization and operation of the newly established school for training NATO commanders and staff officers. "MDAP Air Depot" describes our methods and poli-

New USAF Reg. Permits Demotions of Airmen

The Air Force has published a new regulation which will permit administrative demotion of airmen, effective 1 March, when other changes in airmen regulations go into effect, including the awarding of permanent ranks to those below the top three grades.

The new regulation, AFR 39-30, 10 Feb., has been written to permit non-punitive demotion of all airmen to grades commensurate with demonstrated abilities and skills. It delegates this authority to subordinate commanders designated by major commanders as promotion authorities and states that no promotions may be made below the grade of airman third class.

The Air Force stressed that demotion action is administrative in character and "will not be used to impose punishment in lieu of court-martial or nonjudicial punishment authorized by Article 15, Uniform Code of Military Justice."

An airman may be demoted, says AFR 39-30, for failure to develop or maintain the proficiency of leadership required of the grade in which serving, or demonstration of lack of fitness to perform in the grade in which serving. Further, he may be demoted for failure to complete training or upon voluntary change in assignment.

cies for furnishing aircraft and associated equipment to our European Allies.

The Air Force Review section contains a detailed and lengthy study of the current Air Force Economy Program. Three major commands, ADC, ATRC, and AMC, are analyzed to illustrate how their efforts to economize is saving millions of dollars in Air Force funds.

Need Fully Manned Bases Overseas, Congress Told

The Air Force high command was called before a closed session of the Senate Armed Services Committee this week to discuss a subcommittee charge that the construction and maintenance of overseas bases have been "shot through" with "waste" and "extravagance."

The critical report by the subcommittee, composed of Senator Wayne Morse, (I-Ore.), and Senator Russell B. Long, (D-La.), who visited about 60 overseas bases during a recess of the 82d Congress, has not been released, and probably won't be until a security review of it has been completed by the State and Defense Departments.

Caretaker Status

Essentially, the report suggested that bases abroad could be maintained by a caretaker force, ready to be occupied and used in an emergency. It also contends that a million dollars can be saved out of seven million dollars authorized for construction of air bases in foreign nations.

The full committee, which is attempting to learn what mistakes have been made in the program, and how these can be rectified in the future, heard General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff; Edwin V. Higgins, retiring Assistant Secretary of the Air Force in Charge of Construction; Maj. Gen. Roger R. Ramey, Air Force Director of Operations; Maj. Gen. John B. Montgomery, Director of Operations for the Strategic Air Command, and Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott.

Gen. Vandenberg Testifies

General Vandenberg told the Senators that the bases have to be fully manned at all times to strike back quickly in case of a sneak attack. Moreover, he said that living standards at the bases must be good to keep men of high technical training in uniform.

Acting Committee Chairman Margaret Chase Smith, (R-Me.), said it was too early to discern if the Air Force answered adequately the charges of waste. Senator Long, who like Senator Morse, is no longer a member of the Armed Services Committee, said the greatest criticisms contained in the reports have not been answered by the Armed Services, although some corrective measures have been taken.

"Savings must be made without reduction of defensive power. To accomplish this will require the help of civilian leaders * * *. Their wisdom and experience must be combined with the wisdom and experience of military men from the three services to get satisfactory results."—PRESIDENT DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER.

One Way to Save. A costly feature of our military defense program is the enormous turnover of personnel necessary merely to maintain current strengths. Selective Service trainees are retained only two years, Reserve officers are released as promptly as possible, and volunteer enlistees return to civilian life when their tours of duty expire. In the fiscal year 1952, 700,000 persons were released from active duty. That meant that 700,000 had to be brought in from civilian life, outfitted and trained merely to keep the strength up and before any increases could be made.

This constant out-go and intake of personnel represents an enormous expenditure. It takes many posts and stations, considerable construction and maintenance, and thousands of trained personnel who otherwise would be serving in combat units.

Unfortunately, this turn-over is much larger than it should be. Although little is said about it publically, all the Armed Services are aware that far too few officers and enlisted men are willing to stay on active duty voluntarily. The reenlistment rates are alarmingly low. Too few selectees are electing to enlist for further tours. Reserve officers in large numbers are biding their time until they can be released instead of desiring to continue in active service. There is even talk that some regular officers from old military families are hesitating to encourage their sons to enter the Service because of the discouraging outlook.

Every military leader recognizes this situation and is deeply concerned about it. Every one of them, too, can put his finger on the cause—the progressive deterioration in the attractiveness of the Armed Services as a career. The simple fact is that year by year Service personnel are being deprived of those rights and privileges—many of them small—which in the past made up in some way for the low pay scales. Even in the matter of pay, Service personnel were shunted aside with half the increase granted to civilian employees and less than half that necessary to meet actual cost-of-living increases. Housing is poor and expensive. The scope of Post Exchanges and Commissaries has been curtailed and their prices increased. Promotions in both commissioned and non-commissioned grades have been artificially blocked. Retirement privileges held out as inducements to enter the Services were abridged after officers and enlisted men went on active duty. Promised medical and dental care for Service families has been curtailed. Often hard and conscientious labor is rewarded by Congressional charges that they are wasteful and extravagant.

With this situation growing progressively worse, and threatened economies further aggravating the problem, it is small wonder that thousands of efficient and desirable commissioned and non-commissioned officers are awaiting their time to get out. Patriotic though they may be, these men feel that they owe it to their families to return to civilian life where the outlook is more promising and the hardships fewer.

Aside from the human side of the problem—the injustices to those wearing their country's uniform—this is a serious dollar and cents matter. It would manifestly be much more economical to improve the prospects for those desiring to make the services their career and thus keep efficient officers and enlisted men on duty and save money on training and reduced turn-over.

We urge the new administration of the Department of Defense and the Military Departments to look into this matter and sponsor a program that will restore the rights and prestige to the personnel of the Armed Services.

Professional Advice. An intensive drive for reduction in expenditures got under way at the Pentagon this week. From present indications there will be a strong effort to take sizable chunks out of the '54 budget and to do it quickly.

Nothing has been said so far as to the part the Joint Chiefs of Staff or the military leaders in the individual Services will play in making these cuts. The Senate Preparedness Committee

A Chance For Reserves

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Help! The present Reserve policies have me "in a dither." Here's how it is!

First of all, I'm almost 57 years old so (unless I get promoted or on a list of LC's selected for promotion) I'll be "washed up" on or before 1 Oct. 1953—over age in grade.

Second, I now command a TO/E unit authorized no grade above LC. There is no reserve unit in this area carrying a Colonel so I've had no chance to gain promotion by filling a higher "berth" for one or more years. My present command is authorized 48 drills and 15 ADT days at summer camp, and this small additional income is most needed.

Yes, I know I can request relief from my TO/E assignment and would then be eligible for consideration for promotion with the non-unit group BUT what assurance have we that such action on our part would anything more than get us out of our present TO/E assignment (where we are getting "drill pay")—then there is always the question of a satisfactory physical examination to haunt us—as we grow older, our chances of physical perfection lessen!

Now for this age-in-grade business! (I'm not "hurting" because I have "more than 30 years" commissioned Reserve service) the chap who at, say 39, was commissioned to meet a then critical need, now needs the 5 years being "chopped off" in order to be eligible for the promised retirement under Title III, P.L. 810. A bit of a kick in the pants for him, I opine.

(Letters to the Editor must have author's name and address, but name will be omitted on publication if writer so states. Longer letters may be extracted for publication.)

Now back to me vs. the probable "zone of consideration" for LC's—it's said that it will probably be limited to those with a minimum of 7 years in grade. Poor me! I remained in my World War II active status until 27 Nov. '46 on which date I was processed, given a terminal promotion and 60 days terminal leave.

If we are so old that we are no longer useful and must be relieved from active assignment, are we not then old enough to be retired under an amended P. L. 810 if we have the required years of service?

Oh! I almost forgot to tell you that my records are OK—my efficiency index was high, all ratings excellent and Sup.—received Commendation Ribbon and O. L. Cluster. Is there any hope?

"OLD TIMER"

Adjusting Tank Tracks

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I read with much interest and curiosity an article in THE JOURNAL of 27 Dec., headlined "Speed Tank Repairs." The above cited article stated that a new method had been perfected for adjusting track tension.

The secret of the new method, it seems, is by use of an attachment on the track adjusting wrench and hooking a cable or chain from wrench to track, then moving tank which in turn will tighten the tracks.

The Major and Sergeant are to be commended for their interest in ease of maintenance devices, however, I am amazed at the method described above as being a "new method." This method of using the tank's pow-reported last year that the rearmament program, insofar as it concerned aircraft, has been "stretched out" and "dragged out" so much that it cannot meet the target date—the end of 1954—determined by the Joint Chiefs of Staff as the period of greatest danger. The same applies to some extent to the Army, the Navy and Marine Corps. If further cuts are to be made there must be a further stretch applied to the "stretch out" and the carefully worked out calculations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, whereby our build-up would be accomplished at the time of greatest danger, will have gone for naught.

Before any further cuts are made, the Pentagon administration and Congress must consult the Joint Chiefs of Staff and carefully weigh the savings against any prospective loss in security.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

"A budget of good news" has been brought to the Allied command during this week according to the Secretary of War, who at his press conference on 11 Feb. said that "the ultimate defeat of the Axis is indicated by our continued success." He added that the Russian victory over Germany "increases in magnitude every day."

50 Years Ago—

Recent difficulties over the payment of the claims of Great Britain, Germany and Italy against Venezuela have undoubtedly fully awakened Congress to the urgent necessity for immediate action in the matter of building up the Navy of this country. That the United States will, sooner or later, be called upon to defend the principles of the Monroe Doctrine is inevitable.

85 Years Ago—

By order of the President, a new Military Division, to consist of the Department of the Lakes, Department of the East, and Department of Washington has been instituted and called the Military Division of the Atlantic, with Headquarters at Washington, D. C. The sub-district of Fortress Monroe, Va., has been abolished, and a portion of the First Military District embraced in that command, except the artillery school and post of Fortress Monroe is designated as the sub-district of Norfolk.

er to adjust tracks has been used on all types of tanks with the out-board type track idler for the past 13 years to my knowledge. I was first exposed to it in 1939 in the 2d Bn. 66th Inf. light tanks at Ft. Benning, Ga. This was before the Army had tank retrievers or heavy wreckers to aid in tank maintenance.

I believe the idea originated either in this Bn. or in the Tank School which was at Ft. Benning at that time. This same method was used throughout World War II by tankers of the 1st and 2d Armored Division. It has been used more recently in Korea by the 73d Tank Bn. The undersigned taught this method at the Automotive Department of the Infantry School during the period 1947-51 in problems No. 1083, 1283 and 4763 which are probably still on file there.

The time element for this operation as given in the above cited article was three minutes. This seems to be a little short, since the proper preparation for track adjustment is to: "allow the vehicle to coast to a stop on level ground without use of the brakes." This means the engine must be warmed up properly and vehicle jockeyed into position, etc. Next would be the removal of portions of fenders and last but not least the removal of the cotter pins from the idler shaft lock nuts, also the difficult job of alignment of serations and replacement of the cotter pins. Yes, three minutes seems a little fast.

Unification-Strategy Report Is Three

Appointment Of Former Chief Committee Aide To White House Post Recalls Objectives Of Report Which Concluded The B-36 Row.

IN the midst of current discussion concerning reorganization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the succession of the JCS Chairman (General Bradley retires in August) and the possibility of a new look at the whole problem of roles and missions of the Services as set forth at Key West and Newport, President Eisenhower has named to the White House staff a man who played an important role in the preparation of a pertinent document which will be three years old next month.

This official is Mr. Bryce Harlow. He was Chief Counsel of the House Armed Services Committee in 1949, when hearings were held on the Air Force B-36 program and on the charges made by certain Naval officials. Involved also in the Capitol probe were the cancellation of the Navy's flush-deck carrier, the USS United States, the status of the Marine Corps Commandant on the JCS, and the relationship of the Army to the other services in a number of areas, such as ground support aviation and airborne troops.

After the bitter hearings were concluded, the Committee published in March 1950 a provocative 56-page report entitled Unification and Strategy. It was widely recognized that Mr. Harlow was the key person in the actual drafting of the report, although the findings expressed, of course, the viewpoint of the Committee and notably its chairman, Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.).

In his work on the far-ranging inquiry into inter-Service wrangles, Mr. Harlow accumulated tremendous background information. This is certain to be of great value in his new post. At the White House, he will be an aide to Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons, USA-Ret., who is coordinating legislative activities.

There is no doubt that important legislation affecting the Armed Services will be recommended by the White House in the next few months and that much of it will touch on issues raised and analyzed in the Unification and Strategy report.

The House Committee recommended, for example, that the entire JCS structure be reexamined, just as is now being urged by such persons as former Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett, Dr. Vannevar Bush, and Maj. Gen. Julius Ochs Adler, USAR, vice president and general manager of the New York Times. President Eisenhower himself has spoken of the need for changes in our defense structure.

The 33-point summary of the Armed Services Committee included the statement that the chairmanship of the JCS should be rotated among the Services. If this recommendation were followed, the likely choice as a successor to General Bradley would be a Naval officer. Air Force leaders are hopeful that an airman will be selected as the Nation's senior military officer.

The House Committee said also that the Marine Corps Commandant should be a member of the JCS. Legislation to this end was sought, but a compromise was worked out in Congress to make the Commandant a JCS consultant. Official photographs of the JCS do not include the Marine Corps chief as a member.

The Committee report, which won wide praise from civilian and military leaders, both in and out of the Department of Defense, directed its criticism at no single Service. Said the Committee:

"All Services have been at fault at one time or another in the unification effort. There are no unification Puritans in the Pentagon."

The Committee recognized prophetically (point No. 9) that "difficulties between the Air Force and the naval air arm will continue because of the fundamental professional disagreements on the art of warfare. Service prejudices, jealousies (Please turn to Page 712)

See Early Approval of European Pact

BRIEF as was the ten-day European visit of John Foster Dulles, Secretary of State, and Harold E. Stassen, Mutual Security Director, their conversations at seven western capitals "encouraged" them to look forward to ratification of the European Defense Community compact in a matter of months. There is no concealment of their hope that, if not actually delivered, ratification will be an assured thing by April, for that would permit the North Atlantic Treaty Council to hold its scheduled spring meeting with a sense of confidence in things to come. And such a meeting in turn could produce results which will favorably influence the American Congress in its mutual-aid deliberations.

THIS IS A RADICALLY different state of affairs from that of a few weeks ago, when recriminations among continental statesmen were leading to predictions that the European army prospect was fading hopelessly, with inevitably bad consequences to the North Atlantic Treaty program and mutual aid in general. There was some firm but friendly speaking in Washington—where one must note a great deal of patience and wisdom has been apparent—and this was certainly influential in Europe. The Dulles-Stassen trip was well timed and well conducted. This is no time to count chickens as hatched and thriving, but we can note with satisfaction that none of the eggs is broken, and their hatching is still possible. In Europe there seems to be a far better understanding than formerly of the necessity of sacrifice in the cooperative process. Mr. Dulles on his return used plain terms to point out that "Germany's economic and military potential . . . is indispensable to an effective continental defense" and also that this must be as a part of "an integrated European defense force that could never be used for national aggrandizement." To us this has seemed fundamental; like many other simple facts, it needed resaying.

Burck, in The Chicago Sun-Times
STILL GLOBAL

THE EDC PROSPECT, not assured but visibly brightened, must have benefited by the striking circumstance that at this very time the Schuman plan, long sought and widely argued, actually went into effect. It affects the six nations primarily interested in the European Defense Community, and while it is concerned "only" with the steel-and-coal activities of those nations, this is in economic terms much like saying that a particular patient's health is concerned "only" with his heart and lungs. Tax-free and quota-free coal and ore are actually crossing the borders. Jean Monnet, a veteran at cooperative labors, as the western Allies of World War II should eternally remember, describes the first day's implementing of the Schuman plan as "an important step toward the eventual unification of Europe, which is its only salvation." The economic fact itself augurs well for the political-military treaty, of which we will be hearing a good deal in coming weeks.

FOR THE PRESENT, certain solid facts can be pointed out—that France's reservations as presented so far are not so unreasonable as once was threatened; that Belgium's refusal to ratify until France's specific demands should become known is hardly reprehensible; that Adenauer's control of the situation in West Germany appears to be much surer than a month ago—largely by reason of a fuller knowledge of requirements; that Britain's review of Dulles' purposes and American planning was far calmer than its fear of what was coming—"the effect of his tour is reassuring," in the words of The Times.

AT PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S REQUEST our new High Commissioner to Bonn, James B. Conant, set forward his arrival date, and is already there, no doubt with a view to being on hand to answer specific questions which may arise in the coming critical weeks of consideration of the treaties. He carries to his job a good knowledge of German nature, and a complete acquaintance with President Eisenhower's wishes. Sound action in the Bonn parliament could easily set the pace for sound action in five other parliaments, and in London as well.

MR. DULLES was out of the country when the tumult rose over Far East policy—in particular about the President's order to the Seventh Fleet. It can be assumed that Mr. Dulles knew about that prospect when he made his speech to the American public a few days earlier, the one in which he confidently predicted that the President would find new "ways to make the enemy change his mind." The order to the Fleet, quite clearly, was one of the ways, and by implication there are others, of which we will learn later. Upon this subject there have been some grotesque alarms, at home and abroad. Some of the people who last year were loudest in their demands for a new approach to the Korean problem now are loudest in their squeaks that they never meant that the new approach should really involve a risk. And some are shocked because Chiang Kai-shek seems likely to use the weapons we have been giving him, publicly, for many months; what, one may ask, did these people think he was going to do with these weapons, and why did they not protest long ago? It should not be necessary for the administration to explain why the "next step" will not be announced in advance, any more than was the Seventh Fleet order. Cold war tactics have numerous resemblances to those of a hot war; and if a primary purpose of this order was to upset Peking, that purpose is achieved. It is a pity, but endurable, that so many others were upset, too.

The newest full dress meeting of Greek, Turkish, and Yugoslav foreign ministers is taken to mean that these three nations, which share so many problems in common, are engaging in a tighter alliance than admitted. It is not the first effort for a Balkan alliance, but it seems to be the strongest to date, with all three of these sturdy nations determined to resist Russian satellite aggression (Belgrade has just ordered three more Bulgarian diplomats home), and all three surer than

Navy Selection System Hit On Hill

ABLISTERING attack against the Naval selection board system and specifically directed at the forthcoming retirement of Capt. Hyman G. Rickover, USN, designer of the atomic submarine, was delivered in the House of Representatives on 12 Feb. by Representative Sidney R. Yates (D-Ill.). He has recommended to the Senate Armed Services Committee that it withhold confirmation of officers recommended for promotion by the selection board which passed over Captain Rickover for a second time. He will retire in June at the age of 52 after 30 years Service.

Representative Yates said "we are in a new age—the atomic age. Let us establish atomic age standards in selecting the officers who are to govern the Navy. Congress must abolish selection methods governed by standards set up in 1916."

He recommended that three civilians be appointed by the President to act with three line admirals and with three engineering admirals in passing upon promotions to admiral rank for engineering officers. The chairman of the board should be an Assistant Secretary of the Navy, said Mr. Yates.

He said stenographic copies of all proceedings should be sent to the President, Secretary of Defense, Secretary of the Navy and chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

A third recommendation was that the Secretaries of Navy and Defense have the right to recommend to the President names other than those suggested by the selection board from among those considered and approved by at least one member. The President would be given the right to appoint officers from those named by the board or by the secretaries.

Representative Yates attributed Captain Rickover's failure of selection "to an admiral's stepped-on toe with a long memory" or to "convoy mentality." Said the Congressman: "Apparently the admirals have transferred the rule of the convoy (restricting speed to that of the slowest vessel) to the field of officer selection. They demand uniformity of thinking. They want a Navy yesman. Rickover is not like that. When he has a job to do, he does it as promptly as possible, Navy protocol to the contrary notwithstanding."

COMBAT PAY DISCRIMINATION is charged by Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.), a captain in the Naval Reserve, who has introduced legislation to eliminate what he calls "inequalities" in the Combat Pay Act. Mr. Van Zandt says the $45 per month should go to all military personnel in the combat zone of operations, whether in the front lines, behind the lines, or at sea. The Navy has protested that the requirement stipulating a minimum of six days per month of being subjected to hostile fire bars almost all men aboard ships in Korean waters from combat pay. This matter was presented to the Incentive Pay Commission, whose report to the Secretary of Defense is expected momentarily.

SENATOR SMATHERS (D-Fla.) has sponsored a bill which would exempt from income tax purposes all amounts up to $2,500 received as a retirement annuity or pension. The bill (S. 875) would apply to public and private annuity or retirement pay.

CAPT. D. D. OVERTON, III., a USMA graduate now serving in the Air Force, was the subject of a tribute inserted in the Congressional Record of 10 Feb. by Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D-SC). The captain became a jet ace when he shot down five MIGs and damaged a sixth in four days of aerial fighting in Korea last month.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Urge Armored Corps—The plea for creation of armored corps made repeatedly during the recent meeting of the U. S. Armor Association at Ft. Knox, Ky. (THE JOURNAL, 7 Feb.), is reiterated in an editorial in the current issue of Armor, the Association's publication. The editorial states that "the lessons of history and the counsel of the mobile warfare experts should be plain. We must think beyond battalions, regiments, groups and divisions; beyond the visible horizon to mobility's horizon—the ranging area of armored corps."

The editorial comments that "whether we team another armored division with the 2d in Europe, or activate one of our present training armored divisions and combine it with the 1st at Ft. Hood, or seek some other solution, the war behind us should be convincing enough proof of the need for an armored corps, without the necessity for further prompting of another continental war."

In the same issue of this publication, there is an article by Maj. Gen. Robert W. Grow, USA-Ret., formerly military attache in Moscow. He states, "there is something alarmingly new in the current trend of thought, which is dangerously backwards; backwards toward trenches, stalemates, immobile human masses, immobile minds and the defense; one way to lose a war (author's italics)." General Grow contends that there should be at least one armored division in three, "with double the ratio in Europe where other nations can better furnish infantry divisions. Let us revive the mobility of mind which will create and can employ an American Army in which mass and mobility are balanced," concludes General Grow.

Service Housing In Peril—Plans to ask Congress for funds with which to build housing units for families of military personnel in a 1954 public works construction program have been jeopardized by the new Department of Defense order calling for review of construction programs.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson has told the Services of an order from Budget Director Joseph Dodge that it will be the policy "to proceed only with those projects which are deemed clearly essential in terms of the objectives of this administration and on such projects to employ the strictest standards of economy."

This means, in effect, a tighter purse string on construction requests as part of the effort to achieve a balanced budget. Even in years when the objective of a balanced budget was not so pronounced, housing for military personnel was consistently treated as a "budgetary step-child."

Notwithstanding the pre-20 Jan. statements of Pentagon officials concerning the critical need for more housing, the likelihood is that little or no money will be asked for family quarters in the current fiscal year.

Badoeng Strait Flies British Admiral's Flag—The flag of Rear Adm. E. G. A. Clifford, C.B., of the Royal British Navy, was hoisted recently aboard the USS Badoeng Strait, during operations in the Yellow Sea. The United States carrier, commanded by Capt. H. L. Ray, USN, is under Admiral Clifford's United Nations Naval Forces on the West Coast of Korea.

While embarked on the Badoeng Strait, the British admiral observed offensive air operations and visited various sections of the vessel. He praised the excellent manner in which the ship operated during his visit.

USNA Grad Withdraws From AF Post—The Air Force almost had a U. S. Naval Academy graduate as its Under Secretary. However, Mr. Robert C. Sprague, prominent New England electronics manufacturer, who had been asked to fill that post by the Eisenhower Administration, this week withdrew his name after it had been decided not to send his nomination to the Senate. This decision was made because of Mr. Sprague's interest in the firm which he founded and which does military business, much of it with manufacturers who produce for the Services.

Mr. Sprague had worked out a careful formula which he thought freed him from the "conflicts of interest" problem and which apparently was agreeable to members of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

But the decision was made not to send his name to Congress; and that is why a 1920 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy will not be Under Secretary of the Air Force.

As THE JOURNAL went to press, no one had been nominated for this post. The Army Under Secretary is Earl D. Johnson, a hold-over. The Navy Under Secretary is Mr. Charles S. Thomas, a West Coast clothing official.

Comdr. Godfrey Goes Abroad—Radio and television star Arthur Godfrey, Comdr., USNR (inact.), left for a tour of Air Force bases in Europe and Africa this week with General Curtis E. LeMay, commander of the Strategic Air Command.

A spokesman said Commander Godfrey was making the tour to "familiarize" himself with Strategic Air Command operations. Asked why the performer should be concerned about Air Force business, the spokesman replied:

"I don't know."

Then he added: "LeMay undoubtedly believed it would be a good idea to show Godfrey what SAC is doing."

Commander Godfrey is a close personal friend of Charles E. Wilson, Secretary of Defense, and it has been rumored that Mr. Wilson plans to make him a consultant or an Assistant Secretary of Navy. A White House spokesman declined to comment on the rumor.

Brig. Gen. Allen To JCS Post—Brig. Gen. Frank A. Allen, jr., commanding general of Camp Gordon, Ga., has been appointed Deputy Director of the Continental U. S. Defense Planning Group in the Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, effective 1 March. He succeeds Maj. Gen. John L. McKee, who will retire shortly. General McKee has been with the Group since October, 1951.

General Allen will be replaced at Camp Gordon, where he has served since January 1952, by Brig. Gen. Charles C. Blamchard, Artillery Commander of XV Corps, Camp Polk, La.

Prior to service at Camp Gordon, General Allen was Chief of Information in the Far East Command, Commanding General of the Yokohama Command, and with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea. During World War II, he served as combat commander with the 1st Armored Division in North Africa, was chief of Public Relations Division, Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, and commanded the 3d Armored Division.

MEMO

To Journal Readers

...The new Defense Dept. chiefs have launched a priority inquiry into the COMMITTEE PROBLEM at the Pentagon and quick action may be forthcoming. Each SecDef in the past complained about "decision (or often, indecision) by committee," but wasn't able to do anything about it. At last official count, 988 boards and committees were listed as active. Now, Deputy SecDef Kyes has told aides he WANTS ACTION to streamline operations. Many committees probably will get the hatchet. Instead, the SecDef's OWN STAFF would take over many responsibilities, as was recommended by former SecDef Lovett. The Services likely would applaud such action, which would erase need for much paper work.

...The Administration is understood to have tapped a former Navy Asst. Sec'y for the post of Defense Dept. General Counsel. He's H. Struve Hensel, a prominent attorney who was GENERAL COUNSEL of the Navy from 1944-45 before moving up to be Asst. Sec'y. The job of Defense Dept. General Counsel has taken on added prestige with the elimination of an Asst. SecDef for Legislation.

...If Congress approves an AF ACADEMY—again, as in past years, many bills have been introduced but no hearings scheduled—voluntary transfer of upper classmen from West Point and Annapolis during the first years of the school's operation will be asked. Among CURRENT SPONSORS of AF Academy legislation is Chairman Short of the House Armed Services Committee.

...President Eisenhower shortly will send to the Senate the nominations for promotion of a number of ARMY GENERALS to fill vacancies. An official tabulation shows that Regular Army separations last month included one four-star officer (Gen. Walter B. Smith), one three-star (Lt. Gen. Edward M. Almond), 20 major generals and 6 brigadier generals. These are retired grades. Upcoming are retirements of Gen. Van Fleet and Lt. Gen. Eddy in March and Lt. Gen. Hays and Lt. Gen. Brooks in April.

...The ratio of field grade to company grade officers in the MEDICAL SERVICES of the Army, Navy and Air Force will increase in the next year. This is because the DOCTOR DRAFT ACT is beginning to affect men in older age groups with specialist qualifications, which means HIGHER RANKS than 1st lt. or lt. (jg) when they go on active duty.

...Official Service travel to London will be severely curtailed during the CORONATION PERIOD. Instructions have gone out that only travel will be approved which cannot be scheduled another time.

...There are reports the House Armed Services Committee may make a demand on the Pentagon for the long-promised WARRANT OFFICER PROMOTION bill. The bill is still in the Bureau of the Budget—in fact, has been there since 27 June 1952. For more than three years now, ever since passage of the Career Compensation Act on 1 Oct. 1949, the warrant officers of the Armed Services have been waiting—patiently, at first—for the bill which would permit an EQUITABLE GRADE SPREAD among the four warrant officer ranks.

Atomic Energy Specialization—The Army has sent a letter to all major commands explaining the career possibilities in the field of Atomic Energy specialization.

Interested officers should make application to the Career Management Branch, The Adjutant General. The letter should state qualifications and make the request to be put on the list for the Atomic Energy Field.

Details of the Army's plan for specially qualified volunteers from both Regular and Reserve ranks to be assigned in research and development agencies concerned with military applications of atomic energy were told in the 17 Jan. issue of THE JOURNAL (P. 591).

Transportation Agency

The Defense Department has established a Joint Land Transportation Agency, with the Department of the Army as executive agent, to coordinate the military use of land transportation and transportation facilities during emergencies declared by the Secretary of Defense.

The JLTA is headed by Col. S. R. Browning, Army Transportation Corps. Three members, representing the Army, Navy and Air Force, and a planning organization which includes military and civilian personnel assigned by the three services, make up the group.

Col. J. T. Goodley is the Army member; Comdr. R. M. Sheaf, the Navy member, and Brig. Gen. C. F. Nielsen has been recalled for 60 days temporary duty to serve as the Air Force member. He will be succeeded by Col. Gilbert L. Curtis, USAF.

Function of the Joint Land Transportation Agency, under Army direction, is subject to the priorities and policies set up by the Joint Military Transportation Committee of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Munitions Board and the Traffic management responsibilities of the Military Traffic Service in the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

This agency will plan for and execute coordination of employment of common use military land transportation, the military use of commercial land transportation, the movement of military traffic over land to or through sea and aerial ports, and other transfer and regulating facilities utilized for military traffic in the interest of greater efficiency and economy.

The agency will also develop plans to avoid congestion of roads, railroads, pipe lines, waterways and terminals during transportation emergencies declared by the Secretary of Defense.

USMC Presents Sword

Lackland AFB

or of the late Brig. Gen. Frank D. Lackland.

The 3740th Pre-Flight Training Group was activated and early in November the first class of cadets was launched on an initial 12 weeks of ground school training. Allied nationals entering the training are given the same course of drill, classwork and instruction as their American classmates.

The first class, graduating 7 Feb. contains approximately 700. Succeeding classes will be larger and are now entering every two weeks instead of each six weeks as originally, building toward an ultimate capacity of around 3,000 cadets. The cadets go directly to basic flying training upon leaving Lackland. In March, this year, Aircraft Observer students as well as pilot trainees will begin receiving pre-flight training at Lackland.

One of the Lackland units steadily expanding in usefulness is the 3702d Personnel Processing Squadron, the doorway to active duty for Air ROTC graduates and reserve officers newly called to service. A decision to include volunteer reserve pilots in the recall to active service early this year added a new group to this category.

More than 1,700 pilots were scheduled for the ten day processing, counseling, classification and instructional phase of this re-entry procedure at Lackland. A team of senior rated officers, including myself and some of my top unit commanders, made up the instructional staff.

OCS Buildup

The USAF Officer Candidate School, at Lackland since 1946, sustained a continuous buildup during 1952. Classes were increased to a capacity load of 640 at year's end, and the 12 December graduation of Class 52-D furnished 499 second lieutenants to the Air Force.

Both the OCS and the Women in the Air Force military training organization moved into a completely new built area during the year and enjoyed a marked growth in line with general Air Training Command and service-wide expansion. Like five of the Wing's male basic training groups, however, the WAF training group became a part of the single group evolved in the base's long range economy drive. Early in the year Lackland was named among about 30 defense installations selected to test the feasibility of conserving personnel by means of several management innovations.

Hundreds of troop spaces were gained by consolidation of units. Other jobs were saved by the broadening of noncommissioned officer responsibilities and delegation of additional duties to administrative officers. An Executive Development Course similar to that taught at the George Washington University, was instituted for all of the base's field grade officers.

Courses For Reserves

Like the OCS, the Officers Basic Military Course, for the purpose of furnishing an eight week indoctrination to reserve officers entering active service with little or no prior military experience, has sustained a steady growth and increased usefulness. The course is carried on by a subsidiary organization of the Officer Candidate Group. This school has already furnished preparatory training and classification for more than a thousand new Air Force officers.

In summary Lackland remains the Air Force gateway for all WAF enlistees, for male enlistees from a broad central area of the nation, for aviation cadets, for officer candidates and for many of the nation's reserve officers. It is the site of Headquarters of the Human Resources Research Center, furnishing the basic manpower for a number of the center's current research projects.

To all of the thousands of young men and women beginning a service career at Lackland we seek to give a fresh, realistic understanding of the challenge they face in behalf of the free world; the hard uncompromising facts of their anticipated contribution to combat, and the growing confidence to face up to the demands of our time.

Further Stretch-Out Threatens Armed Forces

Pentagon must send to the Bureau of the Budget revised fiscal requests. It is obvious that the two-day interval will permit no time at the Secretary of Defense level for the usual reclaims which characterize military budget discussions.

There is little doubt therefore that in the period until 28 Feb., Secretary Wilson, Deputy Secretary Kyes, and Assistant Secretary W. J. McNeill, Defense Comptroller, are working hard on budget figures. It is, therefore, this trio which is likely to play the major role in revising the defense budget.

As for the part being played by the JCS in the fiscal reviews, this is not certain.

While all this action is going on at the Pentagon, the House Appropriations Committee curiously has set 24 Feb.—four days before the 28 Feb. Pentagon deadline—for the start of hearings on the fiscal '54 budget.

$41.5 Billion Estimate

Actually, the Appropriations Committee already has considered some military funds requests of former President Truman, namely the supplemental bill for the current fiscal year. As has been reported (THE JOURNAL, 7 Feb.), the Committee found difficulties in determining whether this was a President's request, with the Republicans saying it wasn't because President Eisenhower had not approved it, and the Democrats saying it was because former President Truman had submitted it.

When the House Committee starts work on the fiscal '54 budget, consideration will begin, unless plans are changed, with Mr. Truman's estimate of $41.5 billion for the Armed Forces, of which $16.7 billion was for the Air Force, $12 billion for the Army and $11.3 billion for the Navy and Marine Corps.

Significantly, in analyzing this budget for Pentagon reporters early in January, Assistant Secretary McNeill called it the best budget ever worked up by the Services since Unification.

He was asked if the budget could be cut. To this, the Pentagon's top authority on the military budget responded that the budget could be reduced if the new administration (President Eisenhower's) should decide that the force level be reduced or if a decision were made not to modernize the Air Force and naval aviation and to do as much shipbuilding as contemplated, and "if it were decided that certain war reserve levels would not be accomplished or achieved in the next two or three years. "Yes, there are some things that can be done," he related. "But in my opinion, I would say that the Army, Navy and Air Force have presented probably the best budget they ever have."

Cuts Would Mean Rejection

If Secretary Wilson, Deputy Secretary Kyes and Assistant Secretary McNeill should now recommend substantial cuts in the fiscal '54 budget, it would mean a rejection of what former Secretary Robert A. Lovett and Mr. McNeill thought was essential prior to 20 Jan.

It is to be remembered that Mr. Lovett, after careful scrutiny of requests from each of the Services, actually recommended to Mr. Truman a budget $1 billion more than recommended to Congress.

Mr. McNeill's statement in January that savings could be made in the fiscal '54 budget if another slowdown in the defense program were directed from higher authority is particularly meaningful in the light of Deputy Secretary Kyes' statement one month later, on 7 Feb.:

"It is requested . . . that the Secretary of each Military Department proceed with a review of the FY-1954 budget estimates for both expenditures and obligational authority. This re-examination, in addition to being pointed towards the objectives and policies outlined in the letter from the Director of the Bureau of the Budget should make every effort to secure intelligent savings and to reassess the urgency of proceeding at the planned rates with the various programs.

"Full consideration should also be given to the utilization of funds currently available in such a manner as to reduce the need for additional appropriations in F.Y. 1954. Following this reappraisal by the staff of the Military Departments and then by your office, and no later than 28 Feb. 1953, please forward a statement to this office indicating by appropriations and projects the changes in expenditures and obligational authority that you propose in the budget that is now before the Congress."

As far as could be learned, no target dollar ceiling has been imposed on the Services or the Department of Defense as was the case in the pre-Korea economy regime of former Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson.

But many observers, in and out of uniform, speculated that it might not be long before the "fat" and "muscle" argument of pre-Korea days were heard again.

Non-Com Re-Up Rate

who came in after Korea and who were not career motivated.

In an effort to offset this expected loss, the Air Force beginning 1 March will permit a man 90 days instead of the present 30 to retain his current grade upon reenlistment.

Simultaneously, the Air Force has announced it is publishing a new regulation this month on "Responsibilities of Noncommissioned Officers" aimed at increasing NCO prestige.

Navy and Marine Corps

The Navy and Marine Corps, like the other Services, are doing whatever can be done internally to restore lost importance to non-commissioned officers and petty officers.

Marine commanders have been told to take whatever action is appropriate to retain veteran non-coms on duty. As one important aid to the reenlistment drive, commanders were told to bring enlisted men's wives into discussions concerning reenlistment. Marine Corps Headquarters also has issued instructions that special steps should be taken to insure that the prestige of non-commissioned officers be safeguarded.

Meantime, attempts are being made by all the Services to achieve greater stability in ZI tours. Overseas, some of the Services have been able to reduce duty tours where men are separated from families. But the Korea rotation requirement remains a formidable problem.

The effort is being made also in all the Armed Forces to counteract, insofar as possible, the trend of recent years which reduced the spread, in pay, privileges and prestige between non-coms and men in uniform only for transitory service, such as draftees.

Need Help

But ultimately the Services know they will be able to go only so far towards solving the reenlistment problem. Military leaders emphasize that help will be needed from civilian officials of the Department of Defense, the Bureau of the Budget and Congress.

Funds for adequate promotions must be provided. Included in the 1953 supplemental budget now pending in Congress are a limited number of dollars to permit some delayed enlisted promotions in the Army. This is apt to be a tip-off on what lies ahead in Congress, but Pentagon officials are optimistic because in the past Congress has been sympathetic to the need for equitable promotions for enlisted men.

In addition to funds for promotion, money must be voted for housing. Service experts who have been studying the reenlistment problem agree that men do not mind frequent overseas service if they can take their families with them, and if when stationed in the United States there is opportunity for a normal family life.

Wherry Housing has helped out tremendously, but it has not provided the entire answer. In many cases, rental charges to enlisted men strain limited budgets and at many installations no Wherry Housing has been provided.

The answer appears to be an increased program of Government-built housing, but Congress must vote construction funds for this purpose and at the moment prospects are not bright.

Slow Promotions Forcing Men Out, Says Rep. Lane

The Army's promotion system got a "dressing down" this week by Representative Thomas J. Lane (D-Mass.), who charged that good men are leaving the Services because "we're not dealing right by them when it comes to opportunity for promotion."

Admitting that Congress as well as the Department of Defense is responsible for the fact that "you can't advance in the United States Army today due to restrictions placed on promotions," Representative Lane called for a relaxation of the limitation on officer promotions made by Congress, and a clarification by the Defense Department as to why non-coms are having such a tough time getting more stripes.

"In this Congress, I believe that the limitation placed on officer promotions will be abolished. At the same time, I think that the Pentagon should be advised that the promotion system for non-coms should be overhauled and then closely supervised so that experienced and competent men can make progress," Lane stated.

Mr. Lane declared that allocation lists for promotions that are received in Washington are being filled by men longest in grade, with no regard for their competency in any specialized branch.

"It's the old story of assigning a plumber to be a medical technician and then promoting him," Mr. Lane said. "No wonder the draft calls for digging down deeper. We're not holding many of the good men that we already have because we're not dealing right by them when it comes to opportunity for promotion."

Kelly Officers Shifted

Two top staff changes were announced this week by Maj. Gen. Clements McCullen, commander of the San Antonio Air Materiel Area at Kelly AFB, Tex. Col. Y. B. Kuykendall, Base Executive, has been assigned to the Philippines, and Col. William H. Matthews, Comptroller, was slated for a Far East berth. They will be replaced by Col. Laurence A. Growdon, formerly commander of the 19th Air Base Group on Guam, and Lt. Col. Emil W. Kontak, respectively.

Col. Kaiser USFA Comptroller

Hq., U. S. Forces in Austria (USFA) has announced that Col. Clifford A. Kaiser has been assigned to the post of USFA Comptroller.

Colonel Kaiser replaces Lt. Col. Alex J. Robinet, Deputy Comptroller, who has served as Acting Comptroller since the departure of Col. Charles A. Pyle, USFA's first Comptroller.

and thirst for power and recognition have had only a bare minimum of influence on the controversy."

The controversy, Pentagon observers realize, threatens to come to the fore again with the central point of focus shifting this time from the Air Force's B-36 to the Navy's flush-deck carriers.

The Air Force is known to feel—and former Secretary Thomas K. Finletter said so specifically—that the time has come for a new formulation of roles and missions.

In 1950, the House Committee said "there is possibility of serious damage to the Nation's defenses (Point No. 8) if too much joint planning is concentrated on individual service questions of a highly technical nature during the formative period of unification."

The Committee added that it had strong doubts "it is a service to the Nation's defenses for the military leaders of the respective Services to pass judgment solely on the technical fitness of either new or old weapons each Service wishes to develop to carry out its assigned missions."

But since that time, Unification has

Davis Rider Hearings Will Resume Next Week

House Armed Services Committee hearings on the Davis Amendment, recessed this week because of the Lincoln Birthday celebrations, are scheduled to resume on Tuesday, 17 Feb.

At that time, representatives of the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps are scheduled to testify.

The Navy has already made its presentation to the Committee.

Meantime, the Navy is making preparations which it hopes it will not have to carry out. If the Davis Amendment is not modified or repealed before 1 April, it will be necessary to reduce 5400 lieutenants to lieutenant (jg).

It is believed virtually certain that Congress will take necessary action to prevent these and any other threatened demotions.

The Services are making a strong plea for repeal of the restriction on officer promotions.

Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo.) of the Armed Services Committee has sponsored a bill which would repeal the Davis Amendment, but which would substitute a requirement for an annual forecast of all officer promotions, permanent and temporary, by each of the Services.

There is a possibility that the hearings may be broadened later to include a complete review of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947. Many members of Congress are said to feel that conditions have changed since that time and that the promotion law should be studied anew.

Japanese Flower Arrangement

A primer on the art of Japanese flower arrangement has been prepared and written by Ellen Gordon Allen, wife of Brig. Gen. Frank A. Allen, jr., commanding general of Camp Gordon, Ga. The 52-page volume entitled "Japanese Flower Arrangement in a Nutshell," provides an excellent introduction to this ancient Far East art which the novice with an eye for such things can readily understand and appreciate.

Mrs. Allen is the daughter of the late Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Walker H. Gordon. She was born in Wilmington, Del., where her father at the time taught Military Science and Tactics at the University of Delaware. She became interested in flower arrangement during the first part of the Korean War when she resided in Korea while her husband was assistant commanding general of the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

Air Command-Staff School

A tabulation of the 353 students enrolled in Class 53-A at the Air Command and General Staff School, which will graduate 19 June, 1953, shows the following breakdown by courses:

Filed officer, 241; logistics staff officer, 44; communications-electronics staff officer, 40; and intelligence staff officer, 28.

grown older and has won another hash mark. The increased costs of specific weapons ($3 million for an AF bomber, $215 million for the flush-deck USS Forrestal) have contributed to the belief of many civilian and military officials that questions of a "highly technical nature" must be dealt with at the inter-Service level—and now.

As debate looms on critical military matters in the 83d Congress, which inevitably will involve the White House and particularly its legislative experts such as General Persons and Mr. Harlow, an important recommendation (Point No. 22) of the Unification and Strategy report is worth recalling:

"Civilian control of the Nation's Armed Forces is integrally a part of the Nation's democratic process and tradition; it is strongly supported by the committee.

"But in supporting civilian control of the Armed Forces, the committee does not mean (1) prevent free testimony before congressional committees by members of the Armed Forces, or (2) the relegation of the United States Congress to a bystander role in issues pertaining to the National Defense."

Army Promotes 481 Lts. To Temporary Captain

THE second eligibility list of line officers awaiting temporary promotions was exhausted this week as 481 first lieutenants were promoted to the temporary rank of captain in Special Orders No. 26, 9 Feb.

Previously, the Army had promoted all recommended line officer captains to temporary major.

It is expected that about 145 majors will be promoted to lieutenant colonel on Monday, 16 Feb., and approximately 50 lieutenant colonels to colonels on Wednesday, 18 Feb.

As reported previously, arrangements are being made for the convening of new selection boards to recommend officers for temporary promotions to fill existing and anticipated vacancies.

The names of those promoted this week follow:

Blesses Navy Chapel

The newly renovated Catholic Chapel at the National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., was blessed by the Apostolic Delegate to the United States, His Excellency, the Most Reverend Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, D.D., in a ceremony on 11 Feb.

After blessing the Chapel, the Apostolic Delegate celebrated with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. He was assisted by Chaplain J. P. GI HAIRCUTS

The old war-time regulation disciplining soldiers who wore their hair longer than was specified by the rules has been invoked again at Fort Ord, Calif.

Maj. John L. Hohman, Post Exchange Officer, issued the new order in a letter which he said reflected the demand of the Commanding General. Post barber shops have been instructed not to give any haircuts other than strictly "military clips."

This means that sideburns are to be clipped at eye level, sideburns trimmed closely, and the crown cropped down to at least 2 1/2 inches. Unit commanders and section chiefs have been instructed to see that these specifications are adhered to by GIs who have their hair cut off the Post.

Educational Services

The Department of Defense recommended this week that Congress make permanent legislation providing for information and civilian education of Armed Services personnel.

"This proposal is designed to provide permanent legislation applicable to all three military departments in relation to information and education activities for military personnel," the Defense Department declared in a letter to Congress. "The Act of June, 1942, authorizes the 'Secretary of War' until six months after World War II to provide for entertainment and instruction in connection with the welfare of enlisted personnel. This wartime authorization was extended . . . and constitutes the only enabling legislation other than the annual Appropriation Acts, for Army and Air Force information and educational activities. The only authorization which the Navy and Marine Corps has in this respect is carried in annual Appropriation Acts. It is recommended that these three authorizations be enacted into permanent law."

TC Women's Club—

Brig. Gen. Paul F. Yount, Deputy Chief of Transportation addressed the members of the Transportation Corps Women's Club at their luncheon meeting 11 Feb., at the Army and Navy Country Club. General Yount used as his topic "The Relationship of the Army wife to her husband's Career." In discussing the subject, General Yount emphasized that the degree of influence the wife can exert on her husband's progress depends on her own attitude as an army wife. She must understand that "Her husband is a member of an organization which is dedicated to National Defense. He is a vital cog in the wheel of this organization. The type of work he does, where he does it, and how he does it are all dictated by the necessity to keep the machine running smoothly." That, General Yount continued, is the essential difference between Army membership and other professional employment, "If you keep this uppermost in your mind, you are a well adjusted Army wife, who will make your husband's job easier, and enhance his chances of thinking more about his responsibilities, with a resultant minimum worry about his family."

At the head table were Mrs. Frank A. Heileman, Honorary President of the Transportation Corps Women's Club, Mrs. Yount, Mrs. Frank Besson, wife of Brig. General Besson, Assistant Chief of Transportation for Operations, Mrs. Harold Miller, wife of Brig. ever before of the West's support. The Yugoslavs are still outside NATO, but not very far outside, all considered.

Peripheral activities this week forced their way to attention. Of first importance in its potentialities was the bombing of the Russian embassy in Jerusalem, with fatalities. The Israeli government took swift action to catch the assassin and to denounce the act. There is an immediate presumption that it was intended as misplaced reprisal for current Soviet persecution of the Jews in Russia and among the satellites; that badly calculated individual revenge could be as ruinous as the assassination at Sarajevo in 1914.

Less important, but interesting, is the hearty reception which Premier Stalin gave this week to the new Argentine ambassador, and the intimation that a quickening of Russo-Argentine trade is in prospect. Our own relations with this important Latin-American neighbor show no betterment.

Use Army Arsenal

Goodyear Aircraft Corporation is operating a small portion of the Army Ordnance Department's extensive arsenal at Radford, Va., it is announced by H. Webster Crum, sales manager. The company is handling final production of GAC-built rocket components at the arsenal.

Mr. E. E. McKisson, a member of management control at Goodyear Aircraft since 1948, is manager of the GAC facility.

Mr. McKisson works closely with Lt. Col. Floyd Spencer, commanding the Radford Arsenal for the Office of the Chief of Ordnance, and John Foster, plant manager for the Hercules Powder Corporation, major operating contractor for the government-owned facility, in overseeing the Goodyear operation.

AF Pentagon Officers

The Air Force, authorized to have 2,800 officers on duty in the Department of the Air Force, had 2,507 so assigned on 31 Dec., according to report to Congress by Maj. Gen. Robert E. L. Eaton, USAF Director of Legislation.

An Air Force statement said that the number of officers on duty in Washington is less than that currently required to meet the phased build-up of the 143-wing program.

Educators Join Activities For Powered Flight Fete

Leading educators of the nation are developing a detailed program for schools throughout the country to take part in the year-long 50th Anniversary commemoration of the Wright Brothers' first flight. Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, AFR, Chairman of the National Committee to Observe the 50th Anniversary of Powered Flight, has announced.

In a meeting held in Washington, D. C., prominent educators of national, local and Government organizations set up an executive sub-committee of the National Committee to carry out one of the latter's prime objectives, namely "to stimulate the education and interest of youth in aviation, and to fix firmly in the public mind an appreciation of the great contributions of aviation to civilization and human welfare."

Dr. Herold C. Hunt, General Superintendent of Schools, Chicago, Ill., who was named chairman of the educational sub-committee, declared:

"Not only this group but all educators are keenly interested in the 50th anniversary of flight. We are developing a detailed program for schools which will be of lasting benefit to the advancement of our youth, not only in an educational way but also in the development of worthwhile interests which strengthen their appreciation of patriotic and moral values."

Career Interest In Youth

He placed special emphasis on an excerpt from General Doolittle's speech at the last Wright Memorial Dinner in which General Doolittle declared:

"Another must is a broad and comprehensive program to develop career interest among American youth in the whole field of aviation, including technology, operations and the armed forces. This should start in kindergarten, go through the grades, on through college and should include widened opportunity for scholarships for the really eager students."

Local Committees Busy

This educational program will be a focal point of activity for local committees throughout the nation. Governors of States and State Aviation Directors are organizing these committees to carry out the 50th Anniversary program which has the support of President Eisenhower and prominent national leaders. The American Municipal Association is asking the mayors of 5,400 cities to issue proclamations and appoint local committees.

Dr. Hunt is a member of a six-man executive committee directing the entire national program in observance of the airplane's 50th birthday.

Serving with Dr. Hunt on General Doolittle's 75-member national committee are: Mrs. Sarah G. Caldwell, Pres., National Education Association, Akron, Ohio; Dr. L. C. Derthick, Superintendent of City Schools, Chattanooga; and Dr. Virgil Rogers, Pres., American Association of School Administrators, Battle Creek, Mich.

Military 'Copter Successes Lead To ATA Committee

The Air Transport Association said this week that the accelerated development of the helicopter by the Military Services "clearly indicates that rotary wing aircraft have a definite place in the national air transportation system," and simultaneously announced creation of the Committee on Helicopters.

Mr. Charles Froesch, vice president, engineering, for Eastern Air Lines, is chairman of the committee. At the first meeting of the committee in New York last week, the following objectives were set forth:

- (1) Define the current markets and determine the traffic potential for various types of helicopter operations.
- (2) Analyze present and projected helicopter designs and determine how these helicopters fit the projected markets.
- (3) Analyze the helicopter operational problems which can be foreseen.
- (4) Develop recommended specifications for helicopter types meeting the foregoing traffic potential and operation problems, considering all economic factors.
- (5) Outline the desirable heliport design characteristics applicable to various helicopter operations.
- (6) Encourage Federal Government policies favorable to the development of safe and practical scheduled helicopter transportation.

Heads RDB Chemical Group

Dr. James Bliss Austin, director of research and chief of United States Steel Company's Research Laboratory, Kearny, N. J., has been appointed chairman of the Committee on Chemical Warfare.

He succeeds Dr. Randolph T. Major, vice president and scientific director of Merck & Co., Inc., as the RDB committee chairman.

Dr. Austin has served with the committee since 1948, first as chairman of the Subpanel on Weapons, Munitions and Dissemination, then as chairman of the Panel on Programs, and for the past year as a committee member. He graduated in chemical engineering at Lehigh University in 1925, received the Ph.D. in Physical Chemistry from Yale University in 1928 and has been with U. S. Steel since then and its director of research since 1946.

Controls For Jet Fighter

Canada's CF-100 jet fighter will be equipped with U. S. built automatic control equipment designed to increase precision in all-weather interception flying.

The equipment—involving three different automatic control systems—will be supplied by Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Company on orders received from A. V. Roe, designer and builder of the plane. The controls include a yaw axis control system, a fuel measurement system and a system for indicating rocket temperature.

Army Ordnance Contract

Remington Rand, Inc., has signed a $22,800,000 contract to operate a new unit of the Louisiana Ordnance Plant at Minden, La., which will forge and machine 155-mm shell bodies.

The new plant, which will employ about 500 production personnel, will be operated by Remington Rand for an initial period of about six months after its completion. In addition the contract calls for the firm to furnish engineering consultant services, to produce production layout designs, and to procure and install production equipment needed.

Adm. Souers Joins McDonnell

Rear Adm. Sidney W. Souers, USNR-Ret., first director of the Central Intelligence Agency, was named this week to the Board of Directors of McDonnell Aircraft Corp., St. Louis, Mo.

Mr. Souers entered the Navy during World War II as a Naval Commander, and retired after a six-year tour of duty as rear admiral. He was awarded the Navy Distinguished Service Medal by President Truman in recognition of his work as Assistant Chief of Naval Intelligence in charge of plans, and Deputy Chief of Staff of Naval Intelligence from July 1944 to January 1946. He served as a representative of the Secretary of Navy on a committee which was instrumental in organizing the Central Intelligence Agency.

Defends Big Business

Admiral Ben Moreell, USN (Ret.), former World War II commander of the Seabees and now board chairman of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., this week bitterly denounced critics of big business who contend that industrialists favor war over peace because of the huge profits reaped by large manufacturers. Such conclusions, he said, "have no validity."

Admiral Moreell was formerly chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

107 Years' Service

Three Army generals completed a total of more than 107 years of military service at a retirement ceremony on 31 Jan. at Sixth Army Headquarters, Presidio of San Francisco.

Retired were Maj. Gen. James A. Lester, USA, Commanding General, San Francisco Port of Embarkation; Maj. Gen. Milton B. Halsey, USA, Deputy Commanding General, Sixth Army; and Maj. Gen. Laurence B. Keiser, USA, whose most recent assignment has been Commanding General, Fifth Infantry Division, Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Navy and Lockheed Sign First Basic Agreement

The first basic agreement between an aircraft corporation and the Navy was signed 3 Feb. by Rear Adm. T. S. Combs, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, and Mr. Courtlandt Gross, executive vice president of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation.

The new agreement, which both parties expect to reduce considerably the amount of time involved in completing a deal, is not in itself a supply contract but is an understanding between the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics and Lockheed as to certain provisions which will be used in all future contracts.

In placing a supply contract, details as to quantities, prices, specifications, and delivery and other specific conditions pertaining to the particular deal will be set forth in full, whereas the provisions agreed to in the "basic agreement" will merely be referenced in the supply contract.

Two Categories

The provisions of the basic agreement, according to Admiral Combs, fall into two categories: those clauses, called mandatory clauses, which will be used in each supply contract, and those clauses which shall be used if the supply contract is one which requires the use of a clause of the type agreed to in the "basic agreement."

Provision is made in the "basic agreement" for modification or amendment of the provisions or its termination when statutes, departmental regulations or the needs of the parties necessitate such action, Admiral Combs added.

The principal benefits of the "basic agreement" from the contractor's point of view, according to Mr. Courtlandt Gross, are namely, faster paper processing, elimination of a major portion of contract bulk, and permitting faster work on the part of negotiating personnel and attorneys.

"First Come" Basis

The Navy Bureau of Aeronautics has contacted all airframe manufacturers with whom they are doing business and is currently negotiating "basic agreements" on a first-come, first-serve basis.

"Although we have contacted the airframe manufacturers first," Admiral Combs stated, "we hope to work out similar agreements with component manufacturers. If there is any way we can speed up our procurement process and still safeguard the government's interest, we are all for it."

President at the signing of the Lockheed agreement, in addition to Admiral Combs and Mr. Gross, were Vice Adm. C. W. Fox, chief of Naval Material; Rear Adm. J. B. Moss, assistant chief for Material and Services, Bureau of Aeronautics; K. V. Sampson, assistant secretary, Lockheed Aircraft Corporation; L. V. Kerber, Lockheed contract officer; Capt. J. A. Haley, director, contract division, Bureau of Aeronautics; Fred Sass, Bureau of Aeronautics counsel; John L. Hill and J. V. Guthrie, Lockheed Aircraft Corporation; and C. C. Slaght and J. S. Tassin from the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Coaxial 'Copter Test

The Navy Bureau of Aeronautics revealed this week the completion of an extensive program involving flight testing to military specifications of the Gyrodyne Coaxial Helicopter. This is the first coaxial type helicopter to complete such tests.

The coaxial 'copter was flown over a year under Navy contract at the heliport of the Gyrodyne Company of America, Inc., St. James, L. I., and the Navy is currently evaluating the test data acquired.

Results of the tests also will be made available, according to Bureau of Aeronautics officials, to the Air Force and Army to permit evaluation of coaxial helicopter designs.
